Mr. Lloyd George Says Labor Will Get Largest Poll

British General Election Campaign Ends Its Last Week Before Vote Next Thursday—Sidelights of Contest Attract Attention—Wife of Premier Sends Message

Close Race Anticipated By Political Observers

LONDON, May 25.—The last week-end before the British general elections, May 30, found all three parties girding their loins to do battle in a contest, the outcome of which appeared unusually uncertain. A close race was anticipated by all political observers. No one issue, no one principle and no one party stood out above the rest, and the unusual number of three-cornered contests further complicated the result.

Former Premier Lloyd George, Liberal leader, today predicted that Labor would lead in the aggregate vote of the country with 7,500,000. He put the Liberals next with 7,000,000 votes and the Conservatives last with 6,500,000. How the 615 parliamentary seats would be distributed, no one foretold, however.

Apart from greater issues, the attention of the British public has centred on sidelights of the campaign. Wives of two political leaders took their part in their husband's campaign last night by speeches or letters.

Mrs. Winston Churchill, wife of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, thinks her distinguished husband is a good housekeeper. She told a gathering of women at Huckburst: "My husband for four years has been the nation's housekeeper. He realir has worked very hard."

WIFE CAN TRUST HIM

Mrs. Stanley Baldwin sent this message to the women of Central Hackney: "I appeal to the women to help my husband in maintaining peace in this country, building up the nation's health and promoting the industry. I pledge my word you can trust him absolutely."

Liberals of the city of London, eager to propagate the faith, today invited all Conservative Cabinet members and candidates to Oxford Street to hear Professor J. M. Keynes speak on the Liberal unemployment plan. Professor Keynes was one of the committee of experts, who drew up the scheme, which the Conservatives have consistently attacked.

Meanwhile, Sir Herbert Samuel, chief Liberal organizer, paid a few compliments to the Conservatives at Llandudno, Wales, last night. He ironically remarked that the Conservative slogan of "Safety First" suggested new problems such as Britannia with an umbrella or St. George and the rabbit, instead of the traditional "St. George and the Dragon."

MOVIE FILMS TO TAKE NEW ADVANCE STEP

Invention Given Tryout in New York Is Said to Promise Change as Great as That Made by "Talkies"

THEATRES MAY NEED ENLARGED SCREENS

NEW YORK, May 25 (United Press).—The movies have taken another step forward.

Engineers and motion picture experts met in a barnlike studio last night and marvelled as two Chinoramas flashed a Niagara Falls scene on a huge glass-crusted screen that was so vivid it seemed the room would be flooded.

George K. Spoor and John J. Bergen were demonstrating the result of ten years' labor. Today it was predicted that the new method would cause greater changes in the motion picture industry than did the "talkies."

It also may change the construction of motion picture theatres, for in the test last night an enormous screen, thirty feet by fifty-two feet was used.

The inventors call the new method "natural vision" photograph.

NEW "CLOSE-UP"

Motion picture experts sensed at once the fact that the invention probably would do away with the necessity of separate "close-ups." For example, if a man is in the foreground and another man comes riding across a plain on a horse, it will not be necessary to show them separately. The horseman will come gradually on to the scene, just as he would if it were a human eye instead of a camera, that was watching him.

All figures appear lifelike, and when an ark from a minimal comedy was thrown on the screen last night the dancers seemed so lifelike that certain cameramen were astonished

FLIGHTS POSTPONED

OLD ORCHARD, Maine, May 25.—The French plane, "Nungesser," will not attempt a transatlantic flight tomorrow, Armeno Lotti, sponsor of the flight, announced tonight. Unfavorable weather held up the hop.

The Green Plash, which Roger G. Williams and Lewis A. Yancey plan to fly to Rome, remained in the hangar. The Green said they would not attempt a flight before Monday.

Saturday Review Wants Changes in British Ministry

LONDON, May 25.—Commenting on Sir Austen Chamberlain's recent announcement that Premier Baldwin has asked him to continue in the Foreign Office and that he has accepted, The Saturday Review, a Conservative weekly, says:

"We have not concealed the belief that Sir Austen at the Foreign Office is a very square peg in a round hole and we cannot feel there is adequate compensation for the inexpressibly dull and ineffectual Geneva Mr. Baldwin will make room for some new blood in the next Cabinet. It should be drawn from the younger members of the Government, who served so faithfully and so well and for the most part so unobtrusively.

Meanwhile both Sir Austen Chamberlain and Mr. J. H. Thomas, prospective Labor Foreign Minister, are to be on exhibition for evidence that they are playfully said to be already packing up for the council of the League of Nations meetings at Madrid next month.

FIRE AT NANAIMO

NANAIMO, May 25.—The residence of Jack Mt. Whitmore, Five Acres, adjacent to Nanaimo, was destroyed by fire this morning, only a small amount of clothing and furniture being salvaged.

Australians to Parade Here on Tuesday

THE Young Australia League party, which will reach the city on Tuesday next, will be tendered an official reception, arriving on the afternoon steamer from Vancouver, they will march to the Parliament Buildings where Premier Tolmie will accord them a welcome. Later the boys will proceed to Government House, where they will be the guests of the Lieutenant-Governor. Subsequently they will be assigned to the homes of citizens who have undertaken to be their hosts while they are in Victoria. On the following day the Government will tender a dinner to the boys at the Empress Hotel. The Premier will attend the dinner and speak.

Leechtown Trail May Be Cleared for Access to Historic Gold Diggings

MEMORIES of Victoria district's only gold rush are recalled by the announcement from the Parliament Buildings that there is a movement on foot to restore Vancouver Island's historic trail leading from Milne's Landing, on the Sooke Harbor Road, to the scene of operations at Leechtown. This route followed closely the Leechtown River, deviating only to avoid difficult ground, and represented about eight miles in length.

The roadbed of the Barkley Sound line of the Canadian National Railways traverses part of the way by which the adventurers crossing of the early sixties reached the diggings, which attracted as many persons as to form a considerable town on the flats. Estimates have differed widely as to the actual population when the camp was at its peak at Leechtown. Sixteen saloons are recorded to have flourished there.

It is proposed to seek the co-operation of the Department of Public Works, to have the trail reclaimed as a link with an historic episode of the colony of Vancouver Island. A cairn has already been erected on the site of Leechtown, where fragments only of the former placer camp remain.

Alien Residents Abandon Efforts To Cross to U.S.A.

TORONTO, May 25.—A special dispatch today from Port Erie, Ont., to The Star, says:

"The 200 or more aliens who have been summoned to the United States to work from both Port Erie and Niagara Falls under the writ of habeas corpus, pending a decision in the Judge Crisler case, will be returned to Canada on Monday.

"Attorneys for most of the aliens have already consented to stipulations to the contents of the writ which were scheduled to be delivered formally in Buffalo Federal Court on Monday.

"The writs are being dismissed as a result of the decisions in the John Orsher and Cook-Dandelion cases, which make it impossible for anyone except native-born Canadians to commute daily to the States for employment.

SWARAJISTS ATTACK RULE OF PRINCES

India Agitators Would Have Native States Made Subject to Rule of Majority in "British" India

PROPAGANDA FOR PURPOSE BEGUN

SIMLA, India, May 25.—"We want the whole of India under a constitutional (Swaraj) self government, with neither one part under discriminative alien sway nor another under autocratic though Indigenous rule," said Pandit Motilal, a leading Indian publicist, in presiding at a conference of subjects of native Indian states today. He said politicians of British India had given up the attitude of non-intervention in the affairs of the Indian states.

The Indian princes, he alleged, in asking the appointment of the Indian states committee under the chairmanship of Sir Harcourt Butler, had merely sought redressment of the country to fall downfall, which, he declared they had entertained a regrettable distrust of their own strength and showed an unjustifiable preference for the protection of Britain.

The speaker asked the princes to prove their sympathy for the aspirations of British India by converting their states into constitutional rulers. He also urged the leading Indian political organizations to draw up a federal constitution for India guaranteeing the states the same autonomous status as the provinces and he suggested an independent financial inquiry into the economic relations of the two Indias.

GROWERS ASK TWO FORMS OF OFFICIAL AID

Government Asked to Finance Strawberry Processing by Providing Cost of Barrels and Sugar

FURTHER MEETING WILL BE HELD

Yesterday representatives of the soft fruit growers' special committee, charged with the presenting of the case for assistance in the line of processing of fruit, met members of the Government. Messrs. H. K. Transer and R. S. Twining of Saanich, were present from the committee, while the Premier Hon. S. F. Tolmie; Hon. J. Hinchliffe and Hon. W. A. A. McKenzie represented the Government.

There will be another meeting on Monday when the remaining member of the committee, Mr. W. D. Manson, of Mission, will also be present. The whole question is being carefully gone into.

The Premier announced, following the conference, that while they had gone into a number of aspects of the situation, it would be necessary to hold another meeting. No announcement was made as to the line of suggested action which it is aimed to carry into effect.

TO GIVE AID

The impression is that the Government will render assistance in the fruit men in the getting of their strawberries particularly to the Eastern market in a processed condition. In the carrying out of such a plan, it would be endorsed by the Government, the aid that is expected

War Deferred In China Till Funeral Ended

SHANGHAI, May 25.—Dispatches from Nanking today stated that the Government considers hostilities with Marshal Feng Yu-Hsiang as a foregone conclusion, with the actual outbreak likely to begin immediately after the state funeral for Sun Yat Sen on June 1.

PEKING, May 26.—Picketing began this city at midnight for the body of Sun Yat Sen, "Father of the Republic," which early this morning started its long journey for a state funeral in the Purple Mountain tomb near Nanking.

It was a strange procession which soon after midnight began to wind its way from the Western hills over a specially built road toward the ancient capital in the lowlands, whence it will go by a circuitous route to the $3,000,000 memorial tomb near Nanking, about ninety miles away.

PLAN TUNNEL AT DEPTH OF QUARTER MILE

Spaniards Propose Highway Under Sea to Africa, Thirty Miles Long, 1,200 Feet Under Sea Level

LONDON TO AFRICA TRAINS PROJECTED

MADRID, May 25 (British United Press).—Disclosed by the prospect that England and France will shortly agree to build the Channel tunnel, Spain is seriously considering the construction of a similar tunnel near Gibraltar connecting the European and African continents.

The tunnel to Africa involves even smaller technical difficulties than the Channel tunnel, but its backers are confident that they can be overcome.

Though the Strait of Gibraltar is less than half as wide as the English Channel, the sea at its narrowest point, is 2,700 feet deep, which renders the construction of a tunnel more impossible.

NOT AT GIBRALTAR

It is therefore proposed to build the tunnel either between the Bay of Vaquera, on the Spanish coast, and the sandy of Tarifa, or between Cape Trafalgar and the Alhadema Point, northwest of Tangiers. In the first case the tunnel would lie at a depth of 1,200 feet and be thirty miles long. In the second, its depth would be only 900 feet but its length would total forty-five miles, of which thirty-one miles would be submarine. It is believed that the first plan will be finally adopted.

The cost of this tunnel is estimated at $60,000,000, while the second project, if carried out, would necessitate an expenditure of $80,000,000. It is considered that the tunnel would be a paying proposition, particularly in connection with the Channel tunnel, as it would bring London within two days' travel of North Africa and contribute to the economic development of Morocco.

HAIL STONES BOMBARD CITY

HOLIDAY CROWDS DRENCHED BY DOWNPOUR—CELEBRATION IS ENDED ABRUPTLY

Succeeding Rain Is Welcomed, However, by Berrygrowers, Who Miss Damaging Hail Storm

Victoria was bombarded by hail stones as large as good sized peas between twenty minutes just after noon yesterday. The barrage was followed by a downpour of rain which had all the earmarks of a miniature cloudburst. Holiday crowds were drenched and nearly all abandoned their plans for celebrated. The hailstorm is believed to be one of the worst experienced in the city for a number of years.

The downpour of rain, however, was welcomed by many of the Saanich berry growers, following two weeks of dry weather. The hail storm was local, some parts of the city hardly feeling the effect of it. Although the rain that followed was fairly general, The rainfall measured at Gonzales Heights amounted to 38 inches.

THE BERRY SITUATION

The outlook at the present time is good for the production of strawberries. The berry plants are blooming well, and are forming up with excellent promise for the crop.

Some anxiety was felt yesterday

ELECTRIC STORM AND WIND FAIL TO FORCE AVIATORS TO GIVE UP

WILL APPEAL JUDGMENT ON TAX ON LOGS

Expectation That Government Will Not Permit Adverse Judgment to Remain Unchallenged

HEAR PRELIMINARY OBJECTION FIRST

The decision reached by Chief Justice Morrison, of the Supreme Court of the province, to the effect that the timber tax which is imposed upon logs exported from British Columbia from Crown-granted lands, is ultra vires of the Legislature and constitutes an export tax, will be carried to appeal in the higher courts. This is the opinion expressed at the Attorney-General's office, although in the absence of the Attorney-General himself, no actual action has yet been taken.

Hon. H. H. Pooley will be back the first of the week, and decision will then be made as to what action is to follow.

The judgment of Chief Justice Morrison was given in the court in Vancouver. It came by way of the launching of suit against the Attorney-General of the province taken by McDonald Murphy Lumber Company, represented by Mr. C. M. O'Brien, K.C., against Hon. Mr. Pooley for a declaration that the timber tax demanded under the act, and in this case amounting to some $2,625, did not need to be paid. The timber was cut on Crown-granted lands within the E. & N. Railway belt, and had been disposed of to Henry Mc. Cheer Timber Company, of Shelton, Wash.

The Crown was represented by

MAN FREED BY JUDGE PROVES TO BE MENACE

Swiss Traveler, Detained by Immigration Authorities and Let Go by Court, Is Again in Custody

TRIED TO DROWN GIRL, IS CHARGE

VANCOUVER, May 25.—Released from the Immigration detention shed Friday morning, Ernest Eltner was captured Friday at 4 o'clock on the alleged attempt to drown a thirteen-year-old girl at Second Beach.

According to police, the man seized Jean Lambert by the hair as she was passing him and succeeded in forcing her to the edge of the water. Lifeguards and bathhouse attendants intervened and Eltner was subdued after a struggle. He was handed over to police, who are holding him for mental examination.

Eltner, a Swiss who is traveling around the world, was released recently by immigration authorities on order of Chief Justice Morrison, after a writ of habeas corpus. He had been detained for deportation by the immigration authorities because of his mental record, but the judge held that he had been recovered and was sane.

Fire Insurance War on Pacific Coast Promised

SAN FRANCISCO, May 25.—Officials of several fire insurance companies here predicted today there will be a general fire insurance war would break out on the Pacific Coast next week. The first slashing of prices, the officials believe, will be a punitive measure directed against seven companies known as the "Firemen's Group of New Jersey."

The seven companies seceded from the board of underwriters of the Pacific several days ago after they had been reprimanded by the board for raising their agents' commissions above the figure the 300 companies making up the board had agreed upon.

The new schedule calls for eleven departures daily from Seattle, in place of the eight listed by the three lines. Five new chair cars will be placed in service June 1. The new Portland rate will be $3.50 for one way and $6 for a round trip, instead of $3 and $5. The Vancouver rate will continue at $2 and $3.50.

CROWD MAKES WILD RUSH IN LONDON PARK

One Hundred Thousand Gather to See Prince of Wales Review Police—Break Through Cordon

GIRLS RUN AFTER CAR ALONG STREET

LONDON, May 25.—Enthusiasm aroused by the Prince of Wales at a review of the Metropolitan Police Force, which celebrated its centennial today, reached an almost riotous stage. One hundred thousand persons gathered in Hyde Park to witness the impressive review. As the Prince entered the parade field loud cheering disturbed his mount, a beautiful chestnut mare. The vast throng held its breath in appreciation as the animal reared and curveted, but the heir to the throne quickly brought the horse under control and rode it sedately down the long blue lines of "Bobbies."

CORDON BROKEN

After the Prince had reviewed 13,000 marching police in front of Buckingham Palace later, a section of the crowd rushed forward to see the Prince depart. A police cordon was immediately broken, and in the wild rush several persons, including a woman with a baby were knocked down and injured.

Civilians joined policemen on duty to renew the cordon at the police gates. The crowd finally responded to the good-humored appeal of the police, "Be sports on our day off," and order was restored.

Even then a crowd, composed mostly of girls, chased the Prince's automobile down the Mall, and some of the girls attempted to jump on the footboard without success.

WILL APPEAL JUDGMENT ON TAX ON LOGS

Mr. R. W. Martin Griffin, K.C., and A. C. Desbrisay.

QUESTION OF PROCEDURE

An objection will be heard before the matter is finally disposed of in the Supreme Court, as to the procedure in naming the Attorney-General as the person to be sued under the statute. It is contended that recourse must lie by way of a petition of right, as the matter is one involving the right of the Crown. This will be argued before the Chief Justice early in the week.

In the meantime the logs are being held as under arrangement between the Dominion and the Province. No clearance is given logs for export under these circumstances, pending the payment of the tax.

The timber tax is a tax that under the statute applies to all timber cut on Crown-granted lands. In case the timber is manufactured in the province, the tax is remitted. It is levied in the form of logs the tax is collected, and the Dominion customs authorities refuse to give clearance until the tax provisions of the province have been satisfied.

The Chief Justice, in giving utterance against the right to collect the tax, took the ground that, in spite of the fact that the imposed was described other than as an export tax, "the nature and general tendency of the tax assailed is to pass it on to the purchaser, and is an indirect tax, which is ultra vires of the Legislature of British Columbia."

The tax was imposed first in 1915 to encourage the manufacture of logs in the province with an impost of $2 per thousand board feet on No. 1, $1.50 on No. 2 and $1.00 on No. 3 logs, made on all logs off Crown granted lands. A refund of all but one cent was made on all logs not exported. The tax particularly concerns loggers in the E. & N. belt, although operations in many other parts of the province are affected.

The export of logs dropped in 1928 from 281,584,243 feet, board measure, in the previous year to 211,847,231 feet in 1928. The export of logs in 1926 represented 224,417,715 feet; in 1925, 210,417,261 feet, and in 1924, 240,530,627 feet.

ONLY NATIVE-BORN ALLOWED

UNITED STATES MAINTAINS A BAR AGAINST OTHER CANADIAN CITIZENS

Right to Cross Boundary Daily to Work Is Restricted to Those Born in Country

BUFFALO, May 25.—Commuting from Canada to this country for employment is barred by American residents of Canada, was halted permanently today when Arthur J. Karnuth, district director of immigration, issued orders to immigration inspectors in all ports of entry along the Canadian frontier that no persons other than native-born Canadians be permitted to commute for employment. The ban applies to British subjects living in the Dominion and naturalized Canadians barred by Supreme Court decision on the Cox-Cancion case and to all non-British or alien residents of Canada barred by the Supreme Court's refusal to revise the Cancision in the Circuit Court in the John Cramer case.

The orders issued were issued by Mr. Karnuth after a half-dozen attorneys representing practically all the aliens commuting under habeas corpus writs obtained by stipulation to dismissal of the writs.

This action, Mr. Karnuth said, precludes the necessity of a court session on Monday, at which he had planned to dismiss the writs and order the aliens returned to Canada.

Effective at once, only native-born Canadians will be permitted to commute to employment here.

HAIL STONES BOMBARD CITY

when the unexpected hail storm struck the city. Inquiries, however, from Saanich seem to indicate that the storm was not a very severe one, and the Saanich peninsula in the berry growing areas escaped the severity of the storm. Only rain, or with it but a very limited amount of hail, was felt in the berry section.

Damage can be caused to berries, which falls far short of cutting off the fruit just forming. It is learned There are instances where hail has in past years been followed by little apparent damage, but when the ripening of the fruit followed, it has been found that a hard spot is present on the berries as a sequel to the damage done, while the fruit was in a very early stage, and which checked the development of that part of fruit which received injury from the hail stone.

The employment service is already prepared to receive applications from pickers of berries, and go give information in relation to the branch of work. With warm weather there will soon be need of pickers to take care of the early crop. Later rains would have the effect of prolonging the season, which it is hoped by the growers will prevail.

A captain of a small trading vessel, having some merchandise goods on board, wanted to unload them at a small port.

"Joe," he said to the customs man, whom he knew well, "if I was to stick a five-dollar bill over each o' your eyes, could yo see?"

"No," replied the man; "and if I had another over my mouth I couldn't speak, either."

Effective May 13, the afternoon boat to Vancouver will leave Victoria daily at 1.45.

BRITISH RAISE FUND QUICKLY

AMOUNT ASKED FOR RADIUM FOR NATION OVERSUBSCRIBED IN WEEK

Thanksgiving to Be Set Aside to Provide for Country's Present and Future Needs

LONDON, May 25.—Within a week's time the British people subscribed a national radium fund which is being set aside to purchase sufficient radium for the country's present and future needs in fighting diseases King George was treated with radium in his recent illness, and this newly raised fund is part of a national thanksgiving for his recovery. There will probably be about $1,500,000 available for the purchase.

Of all the so-called precious metals, radium is by far the scarcest and most costly, though it is not used for ornamental purposes. Its use is largely medicinal, although it is also employed industrially in painting luminous watch dials and similar objects. Every important hospital has its tiny supply of radium, and a careful supervision is maintained over the particles. Usually because of its highly destructive radioactivity, the radium is kept in platinum needles about the size of an ordinary sewing needle, or in glass tubes.

While radium is of great curative value in the treatment of disease, it is so powerful that, if handled injudiciously, one grain could kill a man within an hour of exposure. The radiations break down cells so fatally as well as diseased tissue and even affect the bones, so that great care is exercised in the handling of pure radium. The tubes of radium for medical use contain generally from one to a hundred milligrams only.

Mrs. Gene Tunney Not in Imminent Peril at Present

BRIONI, Italy, May 25.—Mrs. Gene Tunney was resting comfortably this evening after physicians had declared her out of danger from the relapse suffered yesterday. They informed her husband that her condition was good and that her convalescence from the emergency operation for removal of an abscessed appendix on April 30 was proceeding normally.

"No imminent peril," was the words used by the Italian physicians. The former heavyweight boxing champion had been much disturbed by an increase in temperature of his wife and had hastily summoned physicians from the mainland as well as the surgeon, Professor Arthur Wolf Meyer, of Berlin, who had performed the operation.

Premier Mussolini Thinks That He Has Cleared Atmosphere

ROME, May 25.—Italy is now "vaccinated by the Lateran Accords nor the Vatican Embassies," was the striking statement of Premier Mussolini before the Senate this afternoon in urging their ratification. The Duce declared there was a precise definition between the two powers. "My Chamber speech was found difficult," he added. "I will define it as necessary, even in its polemical points which hit the target they were aimed at. It was necessary to clear the atmosphere which, being too sentimental, would have ended by altering the colours, character and objectives of peace."

He—"I can tell you how much water to the quart goes over Niagara Falls."

to be sought is that of taking care of the rest of the barrel in which the shipping is made, and the cost of the same which is put in at the rate of one-half the weight of the berries.

The first under this processing system proposed to be processed as quickly as it is brought from the field. It is then barreled, and kept cool until delivered to the jam makers. Eastern jam factories have been finding their supply of berries for their purposes in shipments from the United States. There has been an expressed desire on their part to utilize the Western berries if they can be delivered in good shape, in preference to the foreign fruit.

The aid which is now sought from the Government is that of lending the assistance suggested, which is less than half of the amount for which the Government would become responsible, if the scheme should become a first charge upon the fruit shipped.

SEEK NEW MARKET

The proposition which the fruit men put forward is that one in which they hope to gain an entrance to the British jam factories, following which they have no fear of being able in future to hold the market, and finance their own proposition without resorting to the Government for temporary aid.

Wind and Rain Descends Upon Winnipeg Show

WINNIPEG, May 25.—Half a hundred winged visitors of aviation's advance buddied in a moist disconfiture this afternoon at Stevenson Field as wind and rain wrecked the programme of the second day of Winnipeg's air meet. Twenty-five "good will" planes, just arrived from St. Paul, had landed but a few hours before a torrential downpour of rain transformed the field into a widespread puddle of mud.

In the wake of a windstorm that swept across Southern Saskatchewan last night, the typhoon of wind and rain broke on Winnipeg with little warning. Gathering clouds threatened for a few moments in mid-afternoon, and then water-bearing gusts bore down upon the city.

STARCH PLANT TO AID POTATO MEN

Excess in Maritimes Will Be Absorbed in Most Demand Now Supplied From Abroad

The Maritime Provinces of Canada have made themselves widely known as producers of excellent potatoes, production in 1928 reaching 15,784,000 cwt., usually exported about seventy per cent of that crop to the United States and Cuba. During the past season there was an over-production of potatoes all over the continent, with prices ranging lower than for a decade back, and the commercially producing sections of the Maritime Provinces have accordingly suffered for lack of markets. This misfortune has, however, in a manner been a blessing in disguise since it is resulting in a very definite revitalization of the Canadian starch industry. It is stated that the prices at which it will be possible to manufacture at the present time will permit a regaining of all the starch business for Canadian industry which prior to the war had assumed large proportions, this was centered in Eastern Canadian manufacturers.

One of the largest starch factories in North America, situated at Hamilton, New Brunswick, has opened up for the first time in ten years. The factory is equipped to manufacture fifty carloads of starch and potato flour during the balance of the season, which will require about 400 carloads. At the same time, as a means of definitely and permanently relieving the situation through taking care of small and otherwise unmarketable potatoes in succeeding years, the New Brunswick Department of Agriculture is encouraging the erection and operation of starch plants in the potato-raising sections of the Province.

The first starch factory under Government encouragement to be opened is at Hartland, Carleton County, and as a result of energetic action taken at an early stage the new industry faces a gratifying marketing situation. This plant when running at capacity can handle 400 barrels of ungraded potatoes per day and should prove a great blessing to farmers in that section of the Province. There is every expectation of other plants being established in due course in other commercial potato-growing sections of the Provinces. The Government of New Brunswick has set a precedent by entering into an agreement whereby it will pay the carrying charges on this stock while on hand up to a valuation of $10,000.

IMPORTS FOUND NECESSARY

Potato starch, which is secured from potatoes and other tubers by macerating as a similar product is from grains by fermenting and then washing in water, has a large number of uses and is in constant demand. There is room for the New Brunswick industry even at the present time the Dominion is not meeting her own requirements in this regard. In 1927 there were four establishments making starch in Canada, and in addition glucose, which is a further product arrived at by boiling with dilute acids. Two of the plants were located in Ontario, at Cardinal and Port Credit, and two in Prince Edward Island, at Hunter River and St. Peter's. This was one more plant than a year previous. The capitalization of the industry stood at $8,121,901, the cost of materials totalled $2,279,275, and the net value of products $1,834,800.

The total amount of starch produced by the industry in 1927 was 67,184,488 pounds, worth $30,570, of this, 41,648 pounds, worth $30,570 was potato starch and laundry corn starch. In producing this the most important item of material was corn to the extent of 135,981,652 pounds, worth $2,272,860, while potatoes used amounted to 2,460,000 pounds, worth $2,602. In the same year Canada imported corn starch to the extent of 1,924,316 pounds, worth 1,100,986 and potato starch and flour to the extent of 4,385,793 pounds, worth $191,545, these coming from the United Kingdom, United States, Netherlands and other countries. Exports of corn starch totalled 781,938 pounds, worth $38,152, and of potato starch 1,130 pounds, worth $144. Thus the apparent consumption of starch in Canada in that year was 22,763,897 pounds, worth $1,855,263, or substantially more than the domestic production.

The new industry in New Brunswick is expected to bring in its wake a varied benefit. In addition to supplanting imports of starch, of which in the ready response of Canadian consumers there would seem to be every indication, it should have the effect of steadying the potato market, a matter of outstanding importance to the farmers of the Maritime Provinces. This is an enterprising step and the operations of the various plants coming into existence will be watched with interest.

Three Canadians Are Candidates In Great Britain

LONDON, May 25.—Canadian representation among candidates in the Parliamentary elections, show only slight change.

Sir Hamar Greenwood and Captain A. Holt, son of Sir Herbert Holt, of Montreal, are not contesting their seats; but Colonel Hamilton Gault, who raised the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry at the beginning of the war, and Grant Morden, the industrialist, are again offering themselves for election, while there is a newcomer in the person of Sigmund Samuel, of Toronto, who is contesting Lichfield.

Angry Passengers—"What good are the figures set down in these railway timetables?"

General Stationmaster—"Why, if it weren't for them figures we'd have a lot o' fellas sittin' out how late the trains are."

AUTO RUNS 59 MILES ON GALLON OF GAS

Automobile engineers who worked for years in an effort to reduce gasoline consumption have found the solution in a marvelous invention that fits all cars. An actual test made by one of the engineers showed fifty-nine miles on a gallon of gas. Thousands of car owners have already installed this new invention. They not only report amazing gas saving, but also have surprised to find quicker pick-up, instant starting, smoother running motors and disappearance of carbon. F. Oliver, 986-1514 F. Third Street, Milwaukee, Wisc., for a limited time is offering a free device to those who will help introduce it. They also need men everywhere to make over $100 weekly in their own territory taking care of local business. Write him at once for free sample and big money-making offer. (Adv.)

PREPARE FOR BETTER WORK IN NEXT TERM

Minister of Education Looking Into Question of High School Correspondence Course

IMPROVEMENTS CONTEMPLATED

The Department of Education is devoting very considerable attention now to preparing for the new High School correspondence course which will be installed in the system upon the opening of the new school year this Fall. When schools open after the Summer holidays, the High School correspondence course will be in hand, and the pupils who are so situated that in the past they were obliged to forego the chance of receiving an advanced course after passing the public school course, will have the opportunity of carrying on their studies.

The Minister of Education, Hon. J. Hinchliffe, is a very ardent supporter of the correspondence courses as a means for giving children who have not the opportunity to attend schools, the chance to get something like an even break with their better privileged mates. He is anxious to have the work carried out in the very best way possible. Accordingly he is lending every aid he can to those charged with the duty of providing for this system.

The work is to fall under the charge of Mr. J. W. Gibson who, at present, is in charge of the elementary correspondence courses. He will add this high school course to the work he now has in hand and take supervision of the whole.

While the records show that the pupils who take these correspondence courses make at least equal advancement, as compared with those attending the schools, the cost of carrying on the work is found to be far less.

There are now some 450 pupils taking the elementary courses in the schools by correspondence. The employees engaged in correcting and carrying on the work necessary under the system is proportionately far smaller than is required under the ordinary schoolroom plans. The records would show that about ninety pupils, on the average, are looked after by each of the teachers employed in the department under the correspondence courses.

Sir Esme Howard Says Dominions Really Nations

NEW YORK, May 25.—"The astounding and momentous "political revolution"—the Imperial Conference of 1926—as a result of which "all the partners in this great commonwealth are 'autonomous communities within the British Empire,'" was outlined by Sir Esme Howard, in an Empire Day speech before the British Commonwealth Club of New York, yesterday.

"You may call them what you will, but they are really nations today, as much as the inhabitants of Great Britain or the inhabitants of the United States," Sir Esme declared in dealing with Canada and other British dominions.

"By the mercy of Providence—we can hardly say how—all this has gradually come about. Even out of the very tragedy of the world war, the British Empire arose, no longer as an empire, but Phoenix-like, in another form, as the greatest and first commonwealth of sister nations the world has ever seen," Sir Esme continued.

DAUGHTERS OF EMPIRE

The Imperial Order Daughters of Empire is a national organization which continues to accomplish excellent work for social and patriotic development in Canada. Primarily its object is of the patriotic character, but it is also a factor of social advancement, as well as an institution for keeping alive those traditions the inspiration of which have so much to do with ideals in national progress. The National Chapter of the I.O.D.E. is holding its sessions here at present with upwards of a hundred delegates in attendance. It is a gathering which annually considers many matters and reaches conclusions affecting them—matters of interest to manhood as well as womanhood, to youth and age. The I.O.D.E. has catholic interests, as much so indeed as any women's organization that exists and it has the faculty of maintaining loyalty to its principles that any similar body might well envy.

The Daughters of Empire are subdivided into so many chapters that they are able to cover a multiplicity of work, yet despite this subdivision there is a unity of sentiment and purpose in action which makes for consistent strength. One of the sources of the Order's hold on its membership is the character which has been so maintained in its leadership. It has always had leaders with ideals and the purposefulness for putting them into practice. Its conceptions have been national and imperial and it is no exaggeration to say that such an organization has proved itself a bond of Empire. In this respect it has fulfilled its main purpose, and the ideals which it has espoused are those best calculated for the promotion of the most enduring kind of patriotic sentiment.

The doings of the National Chapter while in session here must of necessity arouse a good deal of public interest, because it is with matters of public concern that the Daughters of Empire will be dealing. In a city where the Order has such strength the meeting of the National Chapter has more than average significance. It brings with it intimations from all over the country of how women are thinking and the reforms which they wish to institute, for the Order can well be said to reflect much of the best that lies in feminine sentiment to a remarkably accurate degree. Herein lies the importance of such a convention as that of the National Chapter. Its findings are an epitome of the leadership that has already done much useful work in the Dominion, and of the self-sacrificing devotion and loyalty of the widespread membership of the Order to those ideals which have made it a force for good in the country.

THE SOCKEYE SALMON TRAFFY

In a summary of the Articles of the Sockeye Salmon Fisheries Treaty which he has given to this newspaper, in the form of a letter, Mr. J. P. Babcock, the Provincial Deputy Minister of Fisheries, says: "The provisions of the Convention and the regulations issued pursuant thereto shall apply equally to all waters in the State of Washington and British Columbia frequented by sockeye salmon seeking the spawning grounds. It does not explain is that Article IV of the treaty says: "No order limiting or prohibiting the taking of sockeye salmon issued by the International Salmon Fisheries Commission shall be construed to suspend or otherwise affect the requirements of the laws of the Dominion of Canada or of the State of Washington as to the procuring of a licence to fish in the waters on their respective sides of the boundary line."

In other words, despite any attempt to prohibit fishing for the purpose of conservation, fishing may be continued because, to quote Article V of the Convention, "Whenever the taking of sockeye salmon in said waters during said period between the first of June and the twentieth of August in any year is permitted under the orders adopted by the commission in respect of Canadian waters any fishing appliances authorized by the laws of the Dominion of Canada may be used in such waters by any person thereunto legally authorized, and whenever the taking of sockeye salmon in said waters during said period is permitted under the orders adopted by the commission in respect of waters of the United States, any fishing appliance legally authorized by the State of Washington may be used in such waters by any person thereunto authorized by that State."

The plain intention of the foregoing Articles, however adulterated by legal verbiage, is that despite any fishing prohibition by an international commission, fishing shall be legal where licences are given under the laws of either Washington or British Columbia. In other words, Washington can continue to give its licences for traps and purse seines, and so can similar licences be given by the British Columbia coast by the Dominion. Mr. Babcock does not explain wherein lie the beneficial effects of the conservation policy projected by closed seasons of the year, when the international commission, by virtue of the treaty, is not given the authority to make those closed seasons "close."

The gravamen of the charge against the treaty as now drawn is the fact that it gives into the hands of an international commission supervision and direction over resources connected with the Fraser River and its watershed—vested interests which dealt wisely with this province. Both national and provincial rights are affected, and because the former are involved the Conservatives at Ottawa are taking up the fight on behalf of "Canada for Canadians" so as to prevent any alienation in respect to development of the future. There is sound conviction in the plea that the people of British Columbia, just as the people of Ontario and Quebec in the hydro problem of St. Lawrence development, do not wish to see their resources supervised under any system of international control. The fee simple of those resources resides in the people of this country it should be the responsibility, the privilege and bounden duty of Governments to protect the people's rights in every sense. The present treaty is an infringement of those rights and it should be amended before being given the sanction of the Parliament of Canada.

BRITAIN'S CALL

Britain has definitely entered the publicity game for the purpose of attracting tourists to her midst. A Travel Association of Great Britain and Ireland has been formed and already its literature is being distributed to the uttermost ends of the earth. In order that the greatest appeal there are three things emphasized—the quiet charm of the countryside, the world-famous sporting fixtures and the ancient buildings, "which tell the 2,000-year story of the English-speaking race."

The initial folder's merit lies in its brevity. There is a list of the great sporting events in April, May, June, July, August, September and October. There are greetings from the Earl of Derby, who is the first president of the Travel Association, in which he says that the travel agencies, steamship and railroad companies, hotels, motor hire companies and purveyors of all forms of entertainment have combined in a vast publicity organization with the Travel Association as its mouthpiece. Lord Derby says: "We, in Britain, have been slow to organize this business of entertaining—for business it is—but we were ever slow starters. Our critics will, however, concede that we are usually good finishers and the association will try its best to 'deliver the goods.' Our visitors will find here much that is old, much that is beautiful and interesting, and, in addition, much that it is novel." The most fascinating thing in the folder is an extract from a speech by Premier Stanley Baldwin entitled, "Britain Calls You." We quote:

"The sound of England, the tinkle of the hammer on the anvil in the country smithy, the cornerake on a dewy morning, the sound of the scythe against the whetstone, and the sight of a plough team coming over the brow of a hill, the sight that has been seen in England since England was a land. The wind in the sycamores in the woods in April, the last load at night of hay being drawn down a lane in the twilight comes, when you can scarcely distinguish the figures of the horses as they take it home to the farm, and above all, most subtle, most penetrating the smell moving. The smell of wood smoke coming up in an Autumn evening, that wood smoke that our ancestors, tens of thousands of years ago must have caught on the air when they were coming home with the result of the day's foraging, when they were still roaming the forests and the plains of the continent of Europe. These things strike down into the very depths of our nature, and touch chords that go back to the beginning of time and the human race, but they are chords that with every year of our life assume a deeper note in our innermost being. These are the things that make England."

QUEEN MARY

Madam! God made thee royal from thy birth;
Thy parents—well nourished princes, they.
The most revered, by Christians, over the earth;
And Sovereign, through His will to crown thee, (sun!
All those great blessings, by His Might ordained,
As Kingly gifts, to show that He is kind;
As a gentle nature—by His Love inculcated;
A gracious presence; and a noble mind!

On others—gifts He, frequent, hath bestowed;
On other heads hath set a queenly crown;
From royal shoulders regal mantles flowed,
As other prerogatives were removed.

Yet—never hath historic homeland seen
A sovereign-lady with so kind a heart;
To such a course closed seasons "close;"
Whose home life great example doth impart!

The Empire's arms vast million hearts embrace,
That love Mary, Queen of Hearts—Mary, Queen of Hearts!
O mayest thou, for long, still share and grace
Our Monarch's throne—the Empire's truest Friend!
—Eldee Cameron.

"These smokes for the Boys
Are part of the joys
Of international sport,
And are not for report.

'Tis sense, I expect,
While you your duties respect,
Do not be an off smoke
And pilfer the smoke.
The gift and sign
Of friends across the line.

This explanation in view,
It is up to you
To return the 'weeds.'
And now the seed
And give those joys
Back to the boys.

We trust our readers will forgive us for printing the above. We do not know why we printed it, except it were in a spirit of bravado. We do know that we shall avoid the editor for a day or two after it is printed, for reproachful looks are more to be dreaded than hard words. When we first read it, the question presented itself to our mind, what is poetry? That same question had often presented itself to the same mind after reading other scraps of poetry in The Colonist and in other newspapers and publications. The answer to that question was that poetry, like truth, must be as old as creation. So, as it happened, at the time the question presented itself and the answer found not proved altogether satisfactory, there was an absolute authority ready to our hand, and we consulted him.

We suppose nearly everybody who reads poetry or reads poetry has heard of Leslie Stephen. Here is what Mr. Stephen has written about poetry and poets, and we trust it will prove both interesting and illuminating to the major and minor poetasters who are regular and irregular contributors to the columns of The Colonist: "Under poetry, it has been said, there lies a philosophy. Rather, it may also be said, every poetry is a philosophy. The poet and the philosopher live in the same world and are interested in the same facts. What is the nature of the man and the world in which he lives, and what, in consequence, should be our conduct? These are the great problems, the answers to which may take a religious, a poetical, a philosophical, or an artistic form. The difference is that the poet has intuitions, while the philosopher gives demonstrations; that the thought which in one mind is converted into poetry, in the other reacts upon the logic, and that a symbolic representation of the idea is substituted for a direct impression."

The above definition may seem somewhat vague and abstruse. The idea it conveys to us is that the job of being a poet may be a little more difficult than the job of a rhymer or scribbler. That idea had been dimly conveyed to us by another authority who said that a real poet must be endowed with the uncommon gift of prophecy as well as with the common gift of stringing words together in jingling rhyme. There is both music and harmony in the poetry of Longfellow, but there is a deeper musical tone and more sublime harmony in the poetry o. Tennyson.

Then there is the poetry of the mystical order—man? Only the highest authorities are competent to deal with that. "A great imaginative work, like Shakespeare," says Mr. Stephen, "may present us with the most vivid concrete symbols, and yet analyze as forcibly as the formal demonstrations of a metaphysician, the identical conception that the visible and tangible world is a dream-woven tissue concealing infinite and inscrutable mysteries. In each case the highest intellectual faculty manifests itself in the power with which concrete phenomena of the world have been grasped and assimilated. In each case that man is the greatest who soars habitually to the highest regions and gazes most steadily upon the widest horizons of time and space. The task, indeed, of deducing the philosophy from the poetry, of inferring what a man thinks from what he feels, may at times perplex the acutest critic. Here, if it was satisfactorily accomplished, could we infer that the best philosopher is also the best poet.

"... That man is the greatest poet whose imagination is most transfused with nature, who has the deepest truths to proclaim as well as the strongest feelings to utter.

"The highest poetry is that which expresses the richest, most powerful and most susceptible emotional nature, and the most versatile, penetrative and subtle intellect."

Thus, while in a sense it may be true that poets are born and not made, there are times when we neither art nor industry can make a true poet out of anything but the fluid we have made. And yet it may be quite true that many a glorious poetic "flower is born to blush unseen and waste its sweetness on the desert air." Poetry is said to be the highest form of literary expression. Which may be true, but the otur part we derive greater enjoyment from reading good prose; and from a practical or mental point of view prose commands a higher price on the market.

"The Civilization of Tomorrow"

By F. W.

What untold mysteries lie hidden in that phrase! The possibilities of life are limited, but tomorrow, no what may not happen then? Many theories have been advanced on this subject, but few have pointed to the most obvious answer. The key lies in the youth of today, they hold the promise of tomorrow; for they are the harbingers of the new century which foreseeds the civilization to come. Whether it promises to surpass that of today, or not, is a grave problem, which we shall attempt to another question. Are the present youth the equals of those of say fifty years ago, morally, intellectually or even physically? It is difficult to judge and one cannot answer too hastily.

According to Darwin, environment brings about the chance variations on which evolution depends. What then is the environment of today? Do you imagine that it will tend to bring a better and stronger generation, or do you think, as I do, that the craves of modern youth are detrimental to future age? One cannot give an unbiased answer. Youth is reliant now, it asks no advice; individualism rather than trained. Is this a good thing? Yes—and why? Because it is what is unusually in and what is expected of them, and it is a policy which points downward for the nation, in the wake of inexperience. Morally, adolescent independence picks out the scarlet rose, individualism takes the line of least resistance and physically it leaves development behind and fights perfection with licentious living.

ENVIRONMENT OF TODAY

It seems a miracle in this modern age that inorganic matter than this environment is all-powerful, that as the tree is bent so shall it be inclined! It is possible that they age proof of the surrounding infested by cabarets, roadhouses and dance halls? Do they think then some of the wildly exhilarating, suggestive jazz is conducive of good? Are not the disgusting literature teaches them of life? Such are the ensuing in an inorganic mass of a human. It is now sense of course. In reality, the purpose of life today is breeding a new race, among the uncared for multitude of the degenerate, the minority thoughtless youth. Youth, who will be unable to climb into the footsteps of our own revered leaders, who will why not fit them to shoulder their grave responsibilities?

Fundamentally speaking, we are all animals, with corresponding inclinations, and it is by constant training and repression that civilization has evolved to its present status. What will happen when that training ceases and repression is lifted? Ah! that is when the downhill journey commences, when things start to slide, pressing problems seem not so vital, and immorality becomes a matter of a dry impressed word, and an accompanying wink. In short, in relief from the narrow eighteen hundreds, the pendulum has swung far past the happy medium into the fast nineteen hundreds. Is not this extreme as dangerous as the former? More so, it seems to me. One used to murmur, "Discretion is the better part of valor." One might now say, "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread." It is positively astounding to listen to the ideals falling from the young lips around us; subjects are discussed which they are not qualified even mentioning, let alone hear this disgusting consensus termed "charming frankness." Nine-tenths of it is culled from the pages of the literature fed to young people.

The unsuitable literature is one of the real menaces to young people nearing maturity. Minds are more receptive and more impressionable at that period than at any other, and they readily absorb the baneful influence to have it adjusted in the interior to say that people generally refer to the new drydock at Esquimalt. It was built by the Dominion Government at the expense of the people of Canada, costing in all. With interest to date, approximately $18,000,000. This facility should be used more for the repair and overhaul of Canadian vessels.

It is with all due respect to the company that I would draw attention to the large expenditure of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company plying on the Pacific Ocean, and which, I am given to understand, are overhauled and painted at least once a year in the Orient, where labor is cheaper than it is here.

When one stops to consider how much Canada has done for the C.P.R., it is difficult to understand why the company should not utilize the Esquimalt drydock for its vessels whenever the need arises. There is at Esquimalt, too, the firm of Yarrows, a branch of one of the big British shipbuilding companies. This firm, I am informed, can handle any ship of the character which the C.P.R. ocean steamships might require.

I hope that this community as a men in the city will take the matter up with the C.P.R. to insure the ocean vessels of that company making use of the Dominion drydock.

Jots From Literature

JOHN Keats, the gentle poet of Great Britain, lived only twenty-five years. Seven of these were spent as a doctor's apprentice, three in wandering, and three in writing. These were the highlights of his life. He was born in 1795 over a livery stable. His playground was the dirty street. At fifteen he was left an orphan and began his apprenticeship. After seven years he threw aside his surgical art and swore never to touch it again. His life's work he consider was his three small volumes. The poems in them were Britian's finest contribution zapped his strength. He turned at last to Italy, where he died in 1821. "To a Nightingale" is his best known work.

C.P.R. AND ESQUIMALT DRY DOCK

TEN WAYS DESCRIBED

A recent issue of one of the service club's bulletins outlines the following ten ways in which members could "kill clubs":

1. Don't come to the meetings.
2. But if you do, come late.
3. If the weather doesn't suit you, don't think of coming.
4. If you do attend a meeting, find fault with the work of the officers and other members.
5. Never accept an office; it is easier to criticize than to do things.
6. Nevertheless, get sore if you are not appointed on a committee; if you are do not attend the committee meetings.
7. If asked by the chairman to give your opinion on some important matter, tell him you have nothing to say. After the meeting tell everyone how things ought to be done.
8. Do nothing more than is absolutely necessary; but when other members roll up their sleeves and willingly contribute their time and ability to help matters along, howl that the club is run by a clique.
9. Hold back your dues as long as possible.
10. Don't bother about getting new members. Let the few "go-getters" do it.

TRADE TREATY IS WELCOMED

TRINIDAD ANXIOUS FOR FULL ADVANTAGE FROM CANADA-WEST INDIES AGREEMENT

Island Colony Has Many Links Already With This Dominion

Trinidad expects to benefit from the Canada-West Indies Treaty, according to Dr. J. R. Dickson, who, with Mrs. Dickson, has arrived at the Strathcona Hotel. Dr. Dickson is chief medical health officer of the colony and is touring on a holiday, intending to cross Canada from here.

The staple agricultural products of Trinidad, cocoa, sugar and coconuts, are all likely to find increased market in Canada, Dr. Dickson says, and the treaty is popular. Commercial relations have always been intimate already, owing to the representation of the Royal Bank and the Canadian Bank of Commerce in the islands, and a large number of Canadian residents in business.

Another link with the Dominion is the successful mission to East Indian conducted by Canadian missionaries, with headquarters in San Fernando, and widely supported in the southern part of the island. Labor supplies on the sugar estates are largely drawn from the East Indian population and the majority of the cane farmers are drawn from that nationality.

Of that remarkable natural phenomenon, the pitch lake, which has made Trinidad world famous and is an important source of production of the world's supply of asphalt, as well as a valuable source of government revenue, Dr. Dickson says it is well managed by an American syndicate, the Trinidad Asphalt Co., which is also operating a smaller lake of pitch on the mainland of Venezuela.

Bound for Chemainus for lumber, after having loaded at Crofton Harbor, the Chief Capilano was anchored in the Royal Roads at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, awaiting a pilot. In command of Captain John Kerr, she was here for cleaning and painting on May 17.

The British motorship Sperbunk (Captain W. J. Gray) left for Port Elizabeth via San Pedro and the Straits of Magellan at 6.30 o'clock yesterday morning. She loaded 125,000 feet of lumber here, according to King Brothers, shipping agents.

INABILITY TO UNDERSTAND OR EXPRESS LANGUAGE

Some time ago a school teacher patient of mine brought one of her pupils, a girl of twelve, for examination. This little girl had been considered very backward in school, as she seemed to obtain no benefit from her books. The child was well built, intelligent, and apparently healthy. After putting her through a number of tests, I discovered that she was able to remember anything that she heard, but was unable to remember anything coming to her through her sense of sight. She could, however, read quite well, but she could not recall what she had just read unless she spoke out loud and listened to herself reading. She write quite well with her right hand, and when I asked her to perform various intricate actions she invariably performed them with her left hand. Upon questioning the mother, I learned that the little girl was naturally left handed, but had been forced to use her right hand even against her will.

We often find this type of aphasia resulting from forcing a naturally left handed child to use the right hand in expressing itself. After the child was placed upon a short fast and then allowed to use her left hand for a few months, she finally developed the ability to memorize from her books.

The term aphasia includes a variety of defects such as inability to express by speech, writing, or signs, or to comprehend either in spoken, written or sign language. Aphasia is caused by some lesion in the brain affecting the expression or understanding of language. However, a remember anything coming to her through her sense of sight. George Bernard Shaw Is Invited to Victoria, if He Visits United States

Everyone who knows anything about Mr G Bernard Shaw knows that he is a pronounced opponent of vivisection and uses his powers on behalf of afflicted animals whenever possible. It will be remembered that a [illegible] or so ago, when the well-known playwright was on the platform of the British Union for Abolition of Vivisection, whose president is Dr. W R Hadwen, medical student, invaded the hall and by their conduct disorganized the meeting so that Mr. Shaw, the Countess of Tankerville, and other speakers were prevented from giving their addresses.

The International Conference on Vivisection, New York, with which the Victoria organization is affiliated, is using every effort to get a bill through at Washington, D.C. prohibiting the vivisection of dogs; some 100,000 signatures will be attached to the petition asking for this measure. The organization has presented an urgent appeal to Mr George Bernard Shaw, asking him to come over and help by appearing at the special session at Washington when the bill is presented.

The Canadian Anti-Vivisection Society, of Victoria, has cabled to Mr. Shaw, asking that the event of his appearing in the United States, he will continue his visit to Victoria on behalf of the anti-vivisection movement.

"Do you think they approved of my sermon," asked the newly appointed vicar, hopeful that he had made a good impression.

"Yes—I think so," replied his wife, "they were all nodding."

COMMISSIONER RETURNS FROM POLICE PROBE

Mr. Lindley Crease Has Investigated the Allegations Against Chief of Police in Kelowna

REPORT WILL BE READY SHORTLY

Mr. Lindley Crease, K.C., who has conducted an investigation into the police troubles at Kelowna, has returned to the city.

Mr. Crease, who carried out his work under the commission from the Provincial Government has had something like two weeks of steady work in connection with the investigation. He will prepare his report for presentation to the Government as soon as the transcript of the evidence taken has been made.

Mr. Crease had nothing to say with respect to the matter in anticipation of his report to the Government.

Interior papers state that the investigation came as a sudden conclusion when at one of the sessions it was disclosed that a petition, sent to the local authorities some time ago in connection with the alleged punishment of a Kelowna Chinaman, had been written on the typewriter of Police Chief Thomas. The chief has previously denied knowing anything about the petition. The disclosure was followed by an admission from the chief that his previous testimony on this point had not been correct.

The petition had asked that the punishment of the Chinaman for an offence be mitigated, the idea being that it was too severe.

At that point the inquiry being held by Mr. Crease, of Victoria, was called off.

Chief Thomas, who had previously been suspended from duty, has not resumed his office, nor is it expected that he will. Provincial Officer Corrigan, who was the first to allege that co-operation could not be obtained from the municipal chief, is back at his post.

Earlier evidence at the probe was to the effect that vice conditions obtained in places at Kelowna, that the Chinese made monthly payment to the municipal chief. That neither Provincial nor R.C.M.P. officers could obtain any co-operation from him in raids, and that as a matter of fact their raids were alleged to be "tipped off."

MUCH DATA SHOULD RESULT FROM SURVEY

Provincial Government Is Looking for Valuable Material From Investigation of Pacific Great Eastern

ALL PRELIMINARY INFORMATION IN

The Provincial Government expects to gather from the survey which is being conducted this summer, under the joint control of the provincial authorities, the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian National Railways, a vast amount of information regarding the subsidy lands which have been set aside for P.G.E. construction purposes. The information that is to be gleaned will represent a wide diversity of subjects, which will be most valuable to the government, as well as to the two railway companies.

The cost of the work has been estimated at about $440,000. This will be divided into three parts for the purposes of allocating the share of each, so that the season's operations will represent about $147,000 for the province.

At this cost, with the railways bearing the remainder of the outlay required, the Government will gather very much more from the examination than could be expected to be derived by any single-handed operation along this line.

There is to be as little duplication of the work as possible at the hands of the survey officials. In order to avoid this, Mr. C. R. Crystale, who is in charge of the work, and his staff had all the available information in the different departments of the Government dealing with the areas under review gathered together, before the actual field work was planned. With this in hand, covering as it did surveys, timber resources and agricultural areas, there is no necessity to retrace what has been done.

The work of this season will be planned so as to supplement that already in hand.

City & District

Council Meetings—On Monday night the City Council is expected to consider advisability of holding its meetings every two weeks, instead of every Monday night as at present. Every Summer the council adopts the plan when the business of the year slackens off.

Injured Hand—Mr. George Judd, of the steamship Prospector, had his hand badly crushed when a four-ton truck which he was blocking slipped and passed over his arm at 8.30 o'clock yesterday morning. Bleeding profusely, he was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital by Mr. Aubrey H. C. Jones, of the immigration service.

Improving Road—The road to Shawnigan Lake, running from Finlayson's, on the Malahat, to the Island lake resort, is being very much improved by the Department of Public Works this Summer. The road is being widened in many parts, and will have surfacing applied later in the season.

Telephoned From England—Hon. N. S. Lougheed, Minister of Public Works, talked to the Parliament Buildings from London, England, during week by telephone, and his voice was as clear as if he were speaking from another department in the Parliament Buildings. The minister will return here the middle of June.

Natural History Society of British Columbia—The monthly meeting tomorrow will be an open-air meeting. The members will assemble at the Vancouver Island Coach Depot, taking the Sidney bus to the Royal Oak Burial Park vicinity, which is noted in natural history specimens; rock-ladd and swamp will be explored. The return will be by the 7.50 bus. Members are recommended to take lights refreshment.

Canadian Material Used—Due to the efforts made by patriotic organizations to further the purchase of British goods, it is worthy of note that five entries in the May 24 parade were constructed entirely of Canadian-made materials. Heretofore the bulk of the crepe paper and other decorations used has been bought from Massachusetts, this year's supply having been sent from Toronto.

Report Presented—Mr. Oscar Bass, K.C., Deputy Attorney-General, has filed his report on the University situation, which was the cause of complaints being lodged with the Minister of Education, Hon. J. Hinchliffe. The minister has not yet had time to peruse the report, but will take the earliest opportunity to do so, after which a decision will be reached as to what course will be pursued.

Covered by Insurance—The fire which destroyed the farm cottage addition at the Rhondda Mental Hospital early last Wednesday morning did no damage to other buildings there. The building, which was under construction by Mr. H. D. Crawford, under contract, was about 8 per cent. completed. It was covered by insurance and neither the contractor nor the Government will be to any loss, except the delay occasioned. Efficient work is reported to have been done by the staff, and by the fire department from New Westminster, which rendered help.

Parade Judging—Judging of floats in the May 24 celebration parade started at 12 15 it was learned definitely yesterday. It was stated that some confusion arose over the time that the judging should commence and the time at which prizes were printed some weeks before the celebration. Judging was to be at the parade and judging was given as 2 p.m. and 1 p.m. respectively. Unfortunately the times had to be changed to synchronize with other events. This accounts for the confusion. The official programme was correct in the times given as also were the advance announcements in the columns of the newspapers.

New Motor House Will Be Erected On Quadra Street

A New automobile showroom for the Auberry Motors, Limited, will be constructed on Quadra Street, immediately north of Yates Street. Tenders are being called by the architect, Mr. Ralph Berrill. All bids must be in by Tuesday.

The showroom will cost between $10,000 and $12,000, and will be finished with California stucco with large copper-trimmed plate glass windows to afford an excellent view of the cars. The building will also be constructed as a modern mechanical workshop. Work is expected to be started early in June.

LICENCE RIGHT IS QUESTIONED

REFUSAL OF PERMITS TO JAPANESE FISHERMEN SUBJECT OF APPEAL

Rights of Dominion Government in Matter of Fish Canneries Also Sought

VANCOUVER, May 25.—Involving two questions of national importance, the right of the Government to license fish canneries and the right of the Federal Fisheries Department to refuse licences to Japanese fishermen, who are naturalized British subjects, an appeal from the Supreme Court of Canada by the Minister of Fisheries will be heard by the judicial committee of the Privy Council in July.

A. B. Macdonald, K.C., has been retained to argue the appeal for the Federal authorities. He leaves on Monday en route for London, and will stop over in Ottawa to discuss the case with departmental officials.

Opposing the appeal is the Government of British Columbia. Aligned with the province in its fight to control fish canneries are the sister provinces of Quebec and Ontario.

Not since Confederation has the power of the Minister of Fisheries to license canneries and to license, with discrimination, fishermen been previously considered.

"Sea coast and inland fisheries," under subsection 12 of section 91 of the B.N.A. Act were placed under the exclusive jurisdiction of the Dominion. Under that provision the Federal Government claimed the power to license fish canneries and by a section of the Fisheries Act it required all fish canneries to obtain licences from the Minister of Fisheries. Regulations were passed thereunder, by the Governor-General-in-Council, and, in addition to a nominal annual licence fee imposed on canneries a further licence fee, in the nature of a tax, was collected from each case of fish packed.

ENTERPRISE HELD BY STRONG WINDS

Farness-Pacific Motor Liner Forced to Anchor to Royal Roads At 1 P.M.

Although she arrived in the Royal Roads at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the Farness-Pacific motor liner Pacific Enterprise did not berth at Ellis's pier until 7.15, held back by strong headwinds. She was making only fifteen feet of water at the bow, said Captain George W. A. Newman feared that at she reduced speed necessary for safety, the huge bulk would be swung by the wind.

Leaving Manchester on April 20, the liner enjoyed a comfortable and uneventful crossing as far as the canal and Los Angeles. She left Los Angeles for Victoria on May 21, and all the way encountered fog from 50 seas, wind and rain.

Passengers leaving here included Mr. and Mrs. J. B. La Boube, on a short motor holiday to Vancouver Island. Mr. La Boube is with the Farness-Pacific office at San Francisco.

Others were Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Nunn and their two children, to reside in the city, and Mr. William S. Mason, here for a holiday from England. Mr. and Mrs. R. Philipson went on to Vancouver.

ARTIST WILL SHOW CANADIAN PICTURES

Miss Sophie Atkinson to Give Exhibition of Pictures Showing Canadian Scenery

The many friends of Miss Sophie Atkinson, the well-known English water-color artist, will be interested to hear that she will show her pictures at a large exhibition at Newcastle-on-Tyne, which is to be opened this month by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Many sketches of Canada from East to West will be shown—typifying the immense diversity of scenery, colors, industries, etc., to be found here.

A special grouping of pictures, entitled "Hillsborough, near Vernon, B.C., a home in the Okanagan Valley," will also be included, showing the house and garden, the orchard in its fairytale of blossom, and later in fruit, and Long Lake in all its exquisite and unique coloring. Miss Atkinson says her sketches have attracted special attention wherever shown, and thinks they will be of the greatest interest to people in England, who contemplate making a new home in one of the dominions. After the exhibition, Miss Atkinson will leave England for a sketching trip through Europe and hopes to return to Canada next year.

A Matter of "Line"

Paris Fashions Show Subtle Changes Which Characterize Season's Smartest Apparel—Frocks Favor Femininity

In bright but cold weather at Longchamps for coats have been worn with silk dresses, and cloth coats and skirts with fur skins across the shoulders, says a Paris correspondent to The London Times. Straw hats were worn with fur coats and fur-trimmed cloth ensembles. Green and beige, worn together and separate, were popular colors, but black, with flashes of color in linings, pockets, collars and cuffs, was as plentiful as ever, and so was brown. All-black ensembles were worn with shiny black straw hats and fox furs. Some of the long coats had flared forms with fitted backs on sections. Others were straight with cape backs or fullness below the waist behind. Beige tweed coats and skirts were worn with dark and light furs, double hats, and untrimmed beige or brown shoes.

ATTRACTIVE CONTRASTS

Skirts are now longer, though a few are still very short. The fine materials are worn of silk and cloth, little checks, plaids, geometric figures, and small flower patterns being preferred to large flower and broad plaids. Fox furs are worn close round the throat, with the ends falling down the back. High collars on short silk coats may have small scarf ends which tie into big bows in front. Hats, scarf, and bag are made to match. For instance, a brown coat and skirt go with a brown bag and yellow scarf, a brown and beige bag, and a brown straw hat trimmed with three narrow petersham ribbons of beige, brown, and yellow. A checked or plaid skirt may be worn with a plain coat. A fresh spring ensemble is in checked blue and beige, with a navy blue coat lightly trimmed with cheich on the pockets, cuffs, and collar, with it is a shiny dark blue straw hat trimmed with a checked ribbon.

ALL LINES BROKEN

Every dress and coat fits close round the hips. Fullness starts below the hip yoke, which may be broken by a pointed or scalloped edge, ribbing, inrustations, and applications. No line is carried straight or unbroken; it is broken in front, at the back, or at the sides. In front of a blouse is crossed, slanting, scalloped, fringed, pointed or deep, a waist belt is visible only in front, or at the back, or at the sides. A row of buttons goes halfway down. A coat bottoms on the slant. An evening dress neck opening is cut on the slant both back and front. In everything the crooked line is preferred to the straight. Only pleated fineness, killed skirts are left to fall straight.

NEW LINGERIE FRONT

Jean Patou has introduced into his sport ensembles the lingerie front. A jumper deeply pointed in front is worn with a sleeveless glint of white silk or cotton pique. The skirts of the sport ensembles are closely pleated to give width for free movement. A beautiful scheme of color shows a dark nasturtium, yellow skirt, with a grey-beige and yellow jumper fitted with a white silk pique front and a cardigan to match the skirt. There are also morning dresses of jewel fitted with lace-trimmed lingerie fronts and cuffs. There is one in emerald-green and another in beige and brown; both have lingerie collar and cuffs. For the afternoon there are plain crepon dresses with long plain coats lined with printed georgette or chiffon. Afternoon skirts hang full in front, with some fullness at the back also.

Inferiority Of Women Is Established

WINNIPEG, May 25.—A staff writer on the Free Press describes the scene in the Manitoba Legislature when Mr. Bachynsky and Mr. Bachynsky debated two questions of women's mental capacity for thirty-five minutes. A stenographer's salary was one question. Should she get the same as a man?

Women, Mr. Bachynsky, declared, were inferior to men. "The member for Flin Flon is no woman-hater. He hastened to explain that But honesty compelled him to say what was on his heart. Women were inferior to men. Moreover, he shuddered to think the dangerous fever of womanhood being exposed to the ruthless brutalities of commercial life. They should be sheltered and cared for and protected, and Mr Bachynsky threw out an enfolding arm as much as to say that he would like to look after them all.

Mr. Irons considered Mr. Bachynsky a Rip Van Winkle. It was nonsense to say that women were inferior to men, and to prove his point he laid before his audience the following list of women who stood pre-eminent in their fields, he thought:

Music, Kathleen Parlow; Parliament, Margaret Bondfield, Agnes McPhail; reform, Jane Adams; journalism, Ida Tarbell; poetry, Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

To name, he added, only a few.

Mr. Bachynsky rebutted vigorously. Continuing, he said he affirmed his opinion that the following names impoverished and perhaps surpassed that of Kathleen Parlow: Madame Schumann Irving Berlin, Beethoven, Kubelik. To name, he added only a few.

The stenographer was allowed her salary because of all this or notwithstanding.

FIRST SIDNEY GIRL GUIDE CO. MEETS

SIDNEY, May 25.—The meeting of the First Sidney Girl Guide Company was held in the Guide and Scout Hall at 4 p.m. After the flag raising, and the Girl Guide prayer, the patrol leaders called the roll, and the patrols were inspected. Louise Charlesley was then presented with her second class badge, a service star, having completed her first year of guiding, and was congratulated upon winning her sixty-mile badge, the examination being set by Mr. Armstrong. The company then played "Blindman's Horky"—the swallow Patrol winning with a score of 7-1. Mrs. Blythe then gave a most interesting and instructive talk to the second class guides, on the sick nurse badge, while the rest of the company were instructed on the seven knots. At five o'clock the company was dismissed with the singing of "Taps," after which a court of honor meeting was held, a number of important matters being brought up for discussion.

Blind Eyes Made to See

There is no catch in the above statement—eyes that are literally blind are made to see.

The number of people whose sight in one eye is impaired, or totally gone, through blindness, is very great. Blindness usually commences in childhood and grows worse through neglect.

Glasses alone rarely restore sight to these eyes. The visual centres of the brain must be re-excited into activity and the consciousness of vision revived.

Our system of treatment positively restores sight in such cases. Like all other remediable impaired physical or mental conditions, however, treatment is most satisfactory when the remedy is applied in time. The problem is more complex in the adult.

Is your vision equally good in each eye? Try! If it is not, consult us.

Fashion Fancies

By Marie Belmont

Here is a new combination of fabrics that promises to be popular later on—printed chiffon and lace. Whether this combination is a felicitous one depends on the print and how skilfully the lace is applied.

In this model a black and white print satisfies the dress, while the Bertha collar is of black lace. The ruffle on the skirt yoke, which is longer at the side, is of black lace and laid over the chiffon.

Another Important Item

to be considered when deciding upon a funeral director is the equipment that he can place at your disposal. The right equipment is as essential as long experience.

It is well to look into the matter of what funeral director can best serve before the need for such service arises. There is no time to investigate then.

Fine Garden Has Been Made Among the Oaks

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Pooley Have Beautiful Grounds at Residence on Old Esquimalt Road; Many Attractive Features Introduced

Victoria is steadily becoming known as a city of gardens. An intense love of the beautiful, coupled with a particularly favored natural setting of tree, rock and park-land seems to inspire its residents to practise this most delightful of pastimes. Many of the most beautiful of Victoria's gardens are opened to the public from time to time, yet there are countless beauty spots which are tucked away in the less-frequented parts of the district which are just now abloze with Spring loveliness.

Set amid gnarled oaks and grey rock-land, and framed in the dark green of pinewoods, the lovely home of Hon. R. H. Pooley, Attorney-General of British Columbia, is one of the most charming of the delightful homes in old Esquimalt. About two years ago Mr Pooley purchased the P. R. Brown property on Old Esquimalt Road, and from what was more or less wild land has evolved a garden of exceptional charm, characterized by complete lack of formality and artificiality.

The hand of man has taken a second place in the modeling of this garden. A high barren rock bluff at the entrance to the property has been covered with mosses, heuchers, other saxifrages, rainmakers, and wild flowers, while in damp mossy pockets earlier in the season bloomed great clumps of primroses. The lawn slopes under the oak trees, broken here and there with rocks, mosses and borders of tulips, wallflower and saxiera. So sheltered is the garden that a great bed of deep purple violas and stocks has been blooming since March, and an early climbing rose (Dorothy) has also been in bloom for several weeks.

The garden extends over two acres, and is bounded on either side by Hudson's Bay property which is a garden in itself. Through the trees one catches glimpses of lawns, cups and wild canna, the broom stands like a golden glory over all.

A charming feature of the garden is the section devoted entirely to native wild flowers and ferns. Both Mr. and Mrs. Pooley have spent a great deal of time in bringing in ferns and plants from the country, and a carpet of fragrant lady-slippers grow under the fir trees. There are clumps of maidenhair ferns and sword ferns in the deep shades of the woods, and trilliums, erythroniums, wild bleeding heart and innumerable plants seem to relish their foster home.

Mr. Pooley's two children have their special corner of the garden where they grow and tend their favorite flowers. Through the dark one catches little glimpses of the sea, for the house, a fairly built structure of brick and timber in gabled English style, commands a high position on the hill.

There is everything quite old-world about the hollyhocks and delphiniums growing in the herbaceous border along the brick terrace wall, and there is promise of even greater loveliness when the perennials come into bloom.

Mr. Pooley's House and Garden.

Fire Menace In Forests Is Increasing

The forest fire menace for this week is reported by the department to have been very hazardous. The situation throughout the whole of the province, with the one exception of the Prince George district, was very menacing. In Prince George area there had been a substantial rainfall.

The drying up of the woods was reflected in the outbreak of many new fires. There had been 275 reported so far this season as against 146 at this time a year ago. These figures and the general lack of rain makes officials look forward to a bad fire season. Care can prevent many serious outbreaks in the coral fire weeks. It is believed. In view of these prospects the forestry service issued a strong warning to campers, travelers and others using the woods be careful with fire from now on, as the fire season is now definitely under way.

SIDNEY TENNIS CLUB AT CHALET

Court Will Be Sought in Sidney, and Money Is to Be Raised for That Purpose

SIDNEY, May 25—The Sidney Tennis Club has opened the season's play at the Chalet Court on Tuesday and Saturday evenings, and has a good turnout of members. Mr A. Prince, president, and Mrs. George McLean, secretary of the club, are working energetically to increase the membership of the club, and secure the interest in this form of sport.

The club is working this year to obtain funds for the building of a court in Sidney, and for this purpose will hold a military fire hundred drive in Matthews Hall on Thursday evening, May 30. Following the cards, dancing will be held.

The club has received a lovely tennis racquet, a gift from Mr. Lennan, McPeely & Prior, also a jardiniere from David Spencer's Limited, and these are on display at the Sidney Trading Company store, and will be disposed of at the dance the club proposes to hold on July 13 in the Deep Cove Social Club Hall.

Mr and Mrs. O. A. Cochran have kindly invited everyone interested in tennis, and the club members, to a meeting at 8.30 o'clock Tuesday evening, May 28, at their tennis court. Those wishing to play tennis are asked to bring their racquets and play any time after 6 p.m. The usual club game will take place at the Chalet and afterwards the members will attend the meeting. It is not necessary to be able to play tennis in order to attend this meeting, so that everyone interested is invited.

CRAFT SEIZED ON FIRST TRIP

CATHARINE B. TAKEN OFF ROSE POINT, WAS BUILT AT SEATTLE IN APRIL

To Be Charged With Fishing in Canadian Waters in Prince Rupert Court

PRINCE RUPERT, May 25.—The United States salmon troller Catharine B., which was seized by the Canadian patrol boat Rivdin off Rose Point and brought here last evening, was built in Seattle last April and this was her first voyage as a troller. Her skipper is Captain Lyle Thormondsen and he had two men with him.

The Catharine B. is equipped with a Diesel engine and registers fifteen net tons.

VANCOUVER, May 25.—Major J. A. Motherwell, chief inspector of fisheries for British Columbia, reports that the United States salmon troller Catharine B., which was seized off the north coast of the Queen Charlotte Islands on Friday by the patrol boat Rivdin, is the fifty one sixt so seized vessel that is charged with actual fishing in Canadian waters. The other five all caught within the last two weeks, were alleged to be fishing outside Dominion territorial waters, but obeitering overnight in Canadian harbors.

The case of the Catharine B. will probably be prosecuted in Prince Rupert, where she is now held.

KUMTUKS HOSTS AT BIG DINNER

Organization Entertains Representatives of Mainland City Business Women's Clubs

Big groups of Vancouver, Seattle and Bellingham business women invaded the city yesterday on the occasion of the annual Kumtuks Club banquet and week-end celebration. The dinner at the Empress Hotel ballroom last evening (the social amendment had full play) Exchangers of greetings passed between the hostess organization and the visiting guests under the very pleasant conditions, and speeches, community singing, vocal solos, presentations of flowers filled an evening distinguished by much good fellowship and friendliness of feeling. Mrs. Sanderson, of Victoria College, gave the principal address of the evening, which was "A Romantic Odyssey of a Great Heroine, Novella," in other words, the history of the progress of woman from the beginnings of authentic history down to the present time. The outstanding incident of the evening was the presentation by Mrs. H. P. Hodges to the club "mothers" of Colonial bouquets, the senior recipients being Mrs. McLaren, mother of the club president, who is ninety years of age, and other "mother" recipients being Mrs Moden, Mrs. Sylvester, Mrs. Cameron and Mrs. Sprott. Similar bouquets were presented to Mrs. John Stewart, Miss Charlotte Whitton and Mme. Sanderson.

The British, Canadian and American flags draped behind the head table, and bowls of garden bloom formed the decorations. Miss Kate McLaren, the Kumtuks Club president, was in the chair, and with her at the head table were Miss E. Campbell, president of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Vancouver; Mrs. Crehan, president of the Soroptomia Club; Miss Josephine Dauphinee, ex-president of the Business Women's Club, Vancouver, and the vice-president of the same organization; Mme. Sanderson, Mrs. John Stewart, president of the National I.O.D.E., and Miss Charlotte Whitton, who is also here from Toronto representing the same organization. Mrs. Ansomeh, wife of Mayor Ansomeh; Miss Mabel Cameron, past-president of the Kumtuks; Mrs. J. Brooke Stephenson; Mrs. H. B Dawson and Mrs. Mark Graham, wives of the presidents of the Kiwania, Gyro and Canadian Clubs, respectively; Mrs. Irons, of the Seattle Kumtuks Club, and Miss I Farquharson, vice-president of the Victoria Kumtuks.

After the exchanges of greetings Miss Wigley announced that the entertainment for the visitors today would comprise a drive to Sooke Harbor, Belvedere Hotel for tea, leaving Mckenzie's Depot on Broughton Street at 2.30, and returning to the city about 8 o'clock. Among the telegrams of greeting was one from Miss Margaret Kerr, member of the Vancouver Business and Professional Women's Club, now in Detroit, and from Miss Lulu Fairbanks, of Seattle.

The Vancouver visitors, under Miss Dauphinee's direction, sang "Let In the Sunshine," and Miss Doris Bagshawe sang Mrs. Farquharson's parody of "I Passed By Your Window," with its humorous references to climatic idiosyncrasies.

Mme Sanderson's address, which had a characteristic charm and originality of style, was enthusiastically received, and the speaker was accorded a hearty vote of thanks.

COWICHAN HEALTH COMMITTEE MEETS

Resignation of Supervisor Accepted —Miss Blanch McBride Appointed as Successor

DUNCAN, May 25.—The Cowichan Health Centre committee met at the Health Centre office on Thursday afternoon, the president, Mrs. Moss, O.B.E., presiding. Members present were Mesdames Maitland-Dougall, T. Rae, J. C. MacGregor, F. A. Brettingham, George Owens, Bradley, H. H. Whiddon, F. G. Christmas, T. C. Robson, and Miss Claxton. Reports were received from the supervisor and treasurer.

The principal Nursing Centre, dated School was named trustee of the silver cup presented by the Provincial Department of Health to the Cowichan Health Centre as the Provincial Rural Nursing Service Health Day on May 7, the trophy to be held for one year. A cash donation was gratefully received from Mrs. Gladys Weston, being part of the proceeds from a recent entertainment arranged by Mrs. Weston. Mrs. Owens, who has been ill for some weeks, was welcomed back to the meetings.

As Miss Claxton, who has been supervisor for nearly two years, after attending the International Conference of Nurses to be held in Montreal, is leaving for England to visit her parents and to take a postgraduate course, her resignation was accepted with deep regret. Miss Claxton has marked professional ability, and has gained the respect and love not only of the committee, but also of the people throughout the whole district, and regret at her departure will be general.

Dr. H. E. Young has appointed Miss Blanch Mitchell, a highly qualified nurse who has been a member of the staff for the past three months, as Miss Claxton's successor. Miss Aske, an honor graduate of last year's class at the U.B.C., has been appointed as third nurse on the staff, beginning her duties on July 1. Miss Aske is recently took her field work in this district, so does not come as an entire stranger. Mrs. Bradley and Mrs. E. L. Garner were added to the general committee. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. T. Pitt on Wednesday, June 18.

A class in a school in Scotland were having a history lesson. The teacher was reading to them an account of the Battle of Bannockburn. "And when the English saw the new army on the hill behind," he said, "their spirits became damped."

"Now what is meant by damping their spirits?" he asked one bright lad.

"Pittin' water in their whisky," came the prompt reply.

MEMORIAL BEACON IS STEADILY RISING

Builders on Summit of Mount Prevost Making Good Time Despite Difficulties

SOMENOS, May 25.—The beacon is growing fast on the crest of Mount Prevost. The base has been keyed on to the large rock which has been blasted for the purpose, the pedestal or plinth built, and no less than three feet four inches of the column had been raised last Saturday.

On Monday and Tuesday the builders were occupied with rigging the scaffolding, work which on a blind side is negotiable, was quite a job. This finished, work has been steadily forward. Yesterday morning the column had grown six feet two inches.

Visibility has been poor, owing to three hundred acres of slash being burned at Mayo, but many glasses have been trained on the summit and some watchers from below have seen the men at work.

The direction boards have been placed in position and it should be hard to lose oneself now. Where the old trail started there stands a deserted mill. The old trail has been marked, but more people will prefer to drive on to the old Tyee stables and park there.

The mountain road has been greatly improved by the North Cowichan Council. From the stable it is perhaps best to walk up to the Gregory police camp and from there follow the stoneboat road to the summit.

A here account of how the material has been transported up gives no idea of the difficulties which have been overcome and the ingenuity, resourcefulness and perseverance of those who leased the trail and are using it.

Captain J. D. Groves and Mr Ashby are almost constantly on the mountain, working with a will and hand. Mr James Dunkeld and Mr A. S. Thompson worked on getting the camp pitched.

Arrangements have been made for the beacon light, and with a cheery gang working splendidly it will not be long before the building is completed.

Sunday School Float Gains First Prize In Rural Section

LULTON, May 25.—The float entered by the Sunday School of the Reformed Episcopal Mission Church, was awarded by the judges the first prize in the rural section of the May Day parade. Miss Mabel Cross was the fairy princess, surrounded by her attendants, Beatrice Ball, Catharine Hutchison, Normal McCleod, Elsie Bult, Kathleen Field and Lillian Rose, all charmingly dressed. The float was entirely covered with salal, with quantities of flowers and city trees. The float was driven and lent by Mr. Dallimore The work of making the dresses and decorations was carried out by Mesdames McCleod and Hutchinson and Jack Bells and R. Brown.

"A woman is as old as her spine," says a writer. In these days her spine is more apparent than her age.

The very latest yarn from Aberfoyle, the world-famous violinist, was giving a concert in the Granite City. A man whose young son was taking violin lessons thought it would be a good idea to take the boy to Alexander's concert to inspire and encourage him to persevere. But when he got down to the hall he was told there were no shillling seats—no seats left at any price. "Heaven save us!" exclaimed the father. "Do you mean to tell me that there's folk in Aberdeen paylin' ten-six-six to hear a fiddler?" He was assured the hall was packed to suffocation. For a minute or two he said nothing, but his lips were moving in a sort of silent calculation. Then suddenly he pulled his boy towards him, gave him a biff in the ear, and remarked in a voice hoarse with emotion: "Now will you practise?"

"I have tickets for the theatre." "Good, I will start dressing at once."

"Do, dear, they are for tomorrow night."

"She is going to take a course in interior decorating."

"I know, her course in exterior decorating is about complete."

Famous Radio Stars Will Dramatize World's Great Automobile Racing Event

There's a treat in store for the world's radio audience tomorrow night. Graham McNamee, most famous of all announcers, Franklyn Baur, tenor, the "Voice of Firestone," and Vaughn De Leath, comedienne in traffic, are to dramatize the world's outstanding auto racing event—the 500-mile Indianapolis Speedway Classic.

This unique event will be broadcast from the pits of the Speedway. Microphones will be set up beside the speedway, and Graham McNamee will picture the colorful scene for you in the dramatically graphic style for which he is famous. You will hear the traffic, are to dramatize the world's wonderful, 1,500-piece band as it parades down the track—the shouts and laughter of the vast crowds in the grandstands—the whirr and hum of the powerful motors as the mechanics warm them up—then their roar as they swing into the first lap. You'll smile as the candy and pop sellers call their wares—you'll even catch the staccato clicks of the tickers and typewriters.

Then you'll feel that tingling exciting thrill as McNamee describes the start. The pistol cracks—"They're off," he shouts. You fairly see the speed demons at the throttle as they burn up the first round. Their sleek, powerful racers flash in the sun as they thunder along aiming for victory in the gruelling test of prizes offered for any race in the world. Before the race you will meet many of the great stars of the track, as Graham introduces them with the easy familiarity of long acquaintance, and he will describe the crowd and track.

Preceding the dramatization, Mr. Baur and Miss De Leath will sing a few favorite selections accompanied by the Firestone Symphonic Orchestra. The event is broadcast over forty-seven stations associated with N.B.C.

How the Argonauts of 1897 Reached Yukon Goldfields

No. 1

The gold of Ophir was much more ancient than the gold of the Klondyke. Yet it may be doubted whether there was any more romance connected with the discovery, adventure in the case of its development or tragedy in the history of its production in the case of the first than of the latter.

Robert W. Service wrote "The Trails of Ninety Eight," a real Klondyke story, flush with the hectic blow of the foaming mobs that came and went when the Klondyke was in full swing. It pulsates with the feverish life of mining camp drama. Probably it is as true as any similar characterization of mining camp life. But long before such a story of hustling activity could be enacted the Klondyke had to have its pioneers.

Authentic stories of the very first men who penetrated that section of the Far North are scarce. Legends and mythical accounts of the first few men who went into that particular section of the Arctic circle are less reliable than the authenticated history of the first explorers of the Mackenzie basin. Yet such is the persistence of the Whitehead and so resolute is the Anglo-Saxon that, as early as 1866, news began to leak through and ooze into the outer world that there was gold to be found in the banks of the Yukon River.

People doubted the news at first, then, upon sufficient evidence, began to herd it. Afterward the inevitable lure of gold caught its multitude of victims, and a stampede began. It had to have its pioneers.

Among these pioneers was Jerry Whyte, a Victoria citizen whose face and form still are familiar to the residents of today who are alive and remain from the period of nearly forty years ago. With half a dozen other old-timers of his day Jerry penetrated into the terra incognita. Like many others Jerry had eluded under the mesmeric of the rumors of marvellous finds of rich placers near the North Pole. The spirit of adventure seized him, he decided to chuck up everything and head for the new El Dorado. For him and his associates the possible became the probable. Yet, for all of them it was as much of an adventure as the first voyage of Columbus was to the undaunted navigator.

As the story goes gold had been struck on Hunker Creek in the Spring of 1896 by Charles Anderson and James Smith. They brought the news to Jerry, though it was impossible that it had not already leaked out. A perceptible movement of adventurers already had begun in the northern direction with Hunker Creek as their objective. There was no time to lose. The ill-fated steamship Islander already had scheduled trips to the North, with Skagway as the entrepot to the new field. The gaze season was on. The little party of Victorians outfitted themselves handsomely here. Their trappings consisted of 900 pounds each of grub and tools with blankets and the complete necessities. They embarked on the Islander's first trip, which was on July 28, 1897. On their trip North only one incident is worthy of note. The Islander met, off Mare Island, the ill-fated St. Clair of Mexico. The ships passed to starboard and a few hours afterward the City of Mexico ran on the rocks off Mare Island, mark and since has been in Davy Jones' locker. "Ripped, sunken and forgotten" is her epitaph.

The Islander touched at Juneau and went on to Skagway. Juneau was then, as it has remained ever since, only a stopping place. Old Captain Moore had not then built his wharf at Skagway, only a few piles had been driven, the promise of better things. The Islander tied up somehow and discharged her passengers. Her cargo consisted of the outfits of these hardy explorers. There was no heavy freight.

There was considerable controversy in those early days as to whether the White Pass route or the Chilcoot Pass route was the best way into the interior. The frowning buttresses which hill the White Pass discouraged intruders. Nature had built up walls there which, it seemed to adventurers, had never been intended to be scaled. Though these obstructions later were overcome, and the railways reduced the difficulties to a noticeacleable equation, they looked very formidable to all newcomers, among whom were Jerry Whyte and his party. Nine hundred pounds of supplies makes a difference when one has a formidable facade to scale. Jerry and his party decided against the White Pass route. The party went on to Dyea to survey that route. The members of the party had been familiar with the sight of mountains all of their adult lives, but none of them had been called on to face difficulties like those which now confronted them. The fact that the Chilcoot route had been traveled by men and animals for a long period, and that it was a well-packed route which led to somewhere weighed heavily in their decision.

SECTRES SUPPLIES

Off Dyea, where the Islander was anchored, Captain John Irving suggested to Jerry that it might be a good idea to stick the nose of the ship into the mud, and this accordingly was done. The facetious captain further suggested that before this little adventurous party landed it might be well for them to take ample supplies from the ship's larder in case contingencies should arise. The steward of the ship was instructed to furnish the party with such supplies as they might require. The steward asked the major domo, "How much food do you think you will require?" To which major domo replied "Well, you see here are men going to cast off into nowhere for an indefinite period, figure it out for yourself." So, in addition to their own outfit of hardtack and bacon, flour and salt, the ship's commissariat outfitted them with a further supply. Just how much they got even the C.P.N. Company never knew. But they did.

Though new to them, their adventure in trailing their load to the Dyea River, hauling them with ropes while they trailed the boats or waded in the stream are not new in literature. During three days in this camp they had to content themselves with fried victuals. Otherwise their creature comforts were abundant, as their supplies were ample and varied.

To recite the traverse from this point to Killpecker Creek, or Canyon City as it afterwards was called, is unnecessary excepting to acquaint the present generation with the geography of the country or to awaken memories of the old-timers who made the same trail. It took two days for these parties to relay their supplies to this point where they had to build puncheons and throw temporary bridges across creeks and small streams in order to reach Sheep Camp. This hailing place was under what was known as the "Stone House," a curious block of rock as large as a modern hotel balanced on a pivot or pedestal about twenty feet square, the outer overhanging affording shelter for large concourses of campers.

The fate of the Stone House is worth recording. Its precarious position made it a speculation as to how long it would stand. During the stay of Jerry's party in this camp bets were laid that it would not be long before the waters of Crater Lake, high up the mountain behind this peculiar rock, would burst their bound and unbalance the "House" from its pedestal. Five days after this party left Sheep Camp the lake did break away. It swept down the canyon with terrific force and hurled the Stone House a full mile down the river. Sheep Camp suffered great losses. Thousands of dollars worth of supplies were swept away and its ground was covered for days with three feet of overflow.

Over the Chilcoot Pass these parties lowered their supplies down the steep grade to Crater Lake in makeshift transports made by putting frames into huge tarpaulins and lowering these into toboggans down the incline. Tons of freight were lowered in this way, which would have not required more if they had it been carried or packed down in the usual manner.

NEAR LYNCHING

At the summit of Chilcoot Pass an occurrence took place which in the early annals of Klondyke exploitation took place. While parties were busied lowering their supplies a theft of large quantities of select food stuffs took place in the summit camp. A vigilance committee was formed and the guilty party ferreted out. His trial was brought home to him and lynching was decided upon as a fit and proper punishment.

Jerry Whyte believes that, had it not been for his intercession, the American method of execution would have been carried out and summary justice administered. He pleaded that the man must have been intoxicated when he stole the goods, that he had a wife, probably children, somewhere, that no real good could be accomplished by grieving them unnecessarily in such quarters. The result of this special pleading was that the man was let off, but was forbidden to pursue the trail. He unloaded all his supplies and returned to civilization. Jerry will not disclose his name.

Four men of Whyte's party went on four miles to Lake Linderman to build a boat for further transportation. They had to whipsaw their lumber in the old-fashioned way. There were hundreds of people at Lake Linderman preparing for further plunge into the North. Once out of this lake, which is twelve miles long, these parties entered Canadian territory.

MANY SUFFER

On the portage to Lake Bennett many members of parties were discouraged. Several committed suicide in despair. On Lake Bennett many were drowned, hundreds of others lost their effects. All this resulted chiefly because of inexperience and the mad rush of until people toward the prospect of speedy wealth, without any calculation of the inevitable hardships.

On Lake Bennett the parties met terrific gales and had to hide in shelter behind islands, being delayed fifty-two hours. Out of Lake Bennett over the three-mile Caribou crossing was another tax on resources and brawn, but it let them into Tagish River and next day Lewis River afforded them rapid transportation through Miles Canyon into Squaw Rapids and on into White Horse River. At White Horse Rapids the courage and experience of salted and seasoned prospectors again demonstrated the advantage these have over the inexperienced. These rapids present a forbidding aspect and thousands who passed that way were afraid to tackle them in their boats. Roads were cut, often in solid rock, and supplies and boats were portaged across. Whyte's party negotiated a narrow stream just outside the roaring froth of the fiercest part of this narrow gorge, thus gaining hours over competitors in the race.

Takhsa River led them into Lake LaBarge across which fourteen boats started. Only two got through the same day. Though the season was only August the fierce gales which sweep across these Northern waters created havoc among the juvenile navigators who essayed strange adventures.

The Five Finger Rapids let the party into the upper Yukon and, after a thirty-mile run, the Hootalinka River was reached and the Yukon proper. At Stay Mile, or Hell's Gate, the party met in with John Cameron, of Victoria, who had penetrated that far with a small herd of cattle and a number of horses. On the way was the party also met in with David Spencer, Junior, who had built a small boat and formed one of the Bellila of fifty or sixty boats making down the Yukon. There were all the acquaintances met on the whole way.

At White River a curious phenomenon was encountered. The waters here are heavily charged with mineral and sterchonia can use it neither for their boilers nor culinary purposes. It is common knowledge that the mountain sheep and goats, accustomed to nibbling the grass and foliage close to the soil, lick up gold particles and small nugets with their food. In the process of mastication these gold particles become lodged between their teeth until, when they are killed, their mouths resemble the demonstration of a first-class surgeon after a successful and costly operation.

REACH DAWSON

The party arrived in Dawson City on September 22, 1897, six days less than two months after embarking at Victoria. They met on the Yukon River one small steamer bringing back from Dawson a party of Chicago explorers who were returning disgusted and for good. That was the only sign of mechanical life seen on the entire trip. They were carried as far as Rink Rapids from which they canoed and hauled it back to Dyea and water transport.

Dawson City at that time had one small saloon operated by a Frenchman and one or two other log houses. Many more shacks, cabins, business houses and saloons were under construction. On the entire creek territory and including Dawson City the population at that time reached three thousand souls. What happened in the next year, the rapid influx of adventurers, camp followers, genuine prospectors and ultimately successful miners Jerry Whyte proposes to tell in another story.

Let us measure your home for a complete set of screen doors and windows designed to blend with the architecture of your home. An estimate of cost is free of obligation.

OUR neighbor's home was one of the smartest in the block until he put up his screens. Then those old-fashioned screen doors and clumsy-looking window screens ruined the whole effect of a beautiful home. Don't tolerate old-fashioned screens just because you are used to them.

Lemon, Gonnason screen windows and doors give your home tailor-made smartness. Exactly kiln-dried lumber resists warping and shrinking. Precision-cut mortise and tenon joints give rigidity to doors and window screens which close tight and keep flies out.

PAINTED WALLS REQUIRE CARE

Should Receive Attention Twice Annually, Says Helen Martin, as Suggestion for Cleanliness

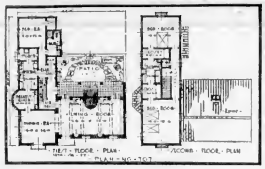
Painted walls, so popular for reasons both aesthetic and practical, are especially appealing to the fastidious housewife. This because they are so easily kept clean and fresh—looking always their best—and, in addition, because this cleanliness, in combination with their hard surfaces, makes painted walls sanitary.

In clean and dry localities the walls will want washing about twice a year, the Spring and the Fall, probably, to keep them in perfect condition. If, however, the atmosphere is damp, smoky or dusty, it will be necessary to wash the walls about three times during the year to insure their best cleanliness and attractiveness. After each washing they will look fresh and new as though they had just been painted.

Special preparations, which make the cleaning work a very simple matter, are available now at places where paint materials may be obtained. A solution of this sort eliminates the scrubbing and effort ordinarily required to obtain a thoroughly clean foundation—it is effective no matter how grimy and dirty the surface may be. This type of dirt remover should be especially good for cleaning woodwork as well as walls, and particularly for hallways, stairs, etc., where the dirt becomes ground in beyond the hope of the ordinary scrubbing brush.

Since a drab, shabby home is depressing not only to grown-ups, but to children as well—and since the cleanliness which can be matched only by freshly painted walls is so easily obtained—it is advisable while washing the walls to go over the entire interior of a house. The operation of the washing is so simple. No matter what color the surface is painted, or what its decorations may be, if the work is done as has been thoroughly outlined, the effect will be as described.

Simple and Compact—and Spanish



THE influence of Spanish architecture is well carried out in this two-story house. The arrangement of rooms is simple and compact, with accessibility to all parts. The porch fireplace with adjoining patio, and the sunny breakfast-room with built-in serving table and cupboards are only two of many outstanding features.

Further information about this plan may be had in the book, "Beautiful Homes," on sale at Spencer's.

My Husband says

"Try Kruschen Salts"

The best advice I ever took! Her letter, published below, proves once again that "it's the little daily dose of Kruschen that does it."

"Kruschen Salts have done me a lot of good. I suffered from my kidneys, and about 3 months ago I was so bad my I came home worse than before I were away, and my husband said, 'If I were you I should try Kruschen Salts.' I tried a jar and now I am a different woman. I was in torture from morning till night with my legs and kidneys, but, thanks to Kruschen, I feel well and can go on with my work without any trouble." APORTIONS BLAME FOR GALLIPOLI

Delay in Launching Expedition, Lack of Shells and Poor Co-operation

Military operations. Gallipoli. Compiled by Brigadier-General C. F. Aspinall-Oglander, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O. Maps and sketches compiled by Major A. F. Becke. Volume I. Inception of the campaign to May, 1915. (Heinemann.).

Great failures in war have often a greater attraction to the reader of military history than have the campaigns which have ended in the glory of victory. It is probable that of all theatres during the Great War that of Gallipoli has most interest for the general public. Therefore there should be a ready welcome for the first volume of the official history of the campaign. Fourteen years have passed since the great landing on the Gallipoli beaches, and it is time that fact should take the place of fiction.

The volume begins with a brief description of the growth of German influence in Turkey during the years immediately preceding the War and a study of the Dardanelles problem from 1907 until 1914. For generations the naval and military authorities had had under consideration plans for the forcing of the Dardanelles should necessity arise, and both soldiers and sailors were in the main antagonistic to the theory that such an operation could be carried through by naval operation alone. Three weeks after the opening of the Great War, and at a time when the attitude of Turkey was obscure, the British cabinet was already considering possible action if Turkey should prove hostile. In September, 1914, the Greek Government offered to seize the Gallipoli peninsula with an army of 60,000, but before there had been time to consider the offer it had been withdrawn because of the Greek king's fear of Bulgarian action.

A SOLDIER'S TASK

The general staff at home impressed on the cabinet the fact that the forcing of the Dardanelles was a soldier's task and that it would be very difficult. But the general staff was not at that time strong enough, and after much political interplay, confusion, and muddle, the British fleet attacked the Gallipoli defences on two occasions. The Turks were warned, and General Aspinall-Oglander gives a good description of the strenuous efforts made by the Turks to improve and strengthen the defences. In February, 1915, Allied troops could have landed without opposition. One month later a landing became a major military operation.

When at last the decision to seize Gallipoli was made and the assembly of the necessary force was begun the measures taken were half-hearted. The expeditionary force was deficient in many essentials of war and had little of the special equipment necessary under the peculiar conditions of the operations. The lack of ammunition was the most serious deficiency. All through the early days of the campaign the authorities at home could not be induced to believe that progress must necessarily be gradual. That belief was to have a deadly influence on the chances of success. General Aspinall-Oglander's description of the preparations for the landing is an adequate defence of the higher command of the expeditionary force. The final plans may be criticized in the light of later knowledge, but the difficulties and the "fog" of the time should be remembered.

The story of the landings is well arranged and clear. Hopeless though the task may seem in retrospect, the margin between success and failure was slight on April 26, 1915. War supplies a series of "ifs," and Gallipoli had its own share. If support had been given at Y Beach, where the landing was unopposed and the road to Krithia was open, it is probable that we should not now include the Gallipoli campaign in the list of great failures.

SUPPORT REFUSED

Support was asked for at an early hour, but it was not given because Admiral Wemyss believed that a change in the original plans would delay the progress of operations. Twenty-four hours later the opportunity had gone for ever. If, again, the Iowa landing the Anzac troops had not lost direction and taken the morning parties ashore 1,000 yards from the proper point, confusion would have been avoided among the units landed, the allotted positions would have been seized and, as we now know, the disorganized Turks would have been prevented from rallying. General Aspinall-Oglander says: "It would appear indeed that by the evening of the 25th, despite the almost impossible task to which the mistake of the landing place had committed them, the Australian and New Zealand troops were within an ace of triumph." Another misfortune of the day was the withdrawal of the French from the Asiatic shore after it had been decided that they should remain at Kum Kale for another twenty-four hours.

The volume ends with an account of the second battle of Krithia—the attempt on May 6-8 to attain the objectives originally set for the day of the landing. The position had not improved in the period between the landing and the beginning of the new battle. The Turks were aided by the nature of the ground, the failed troops were weary and the British lacked gun ammunition.

TURKS DEMORALIZED

It is true that Weber Pasha, appointed to command the Southern Group on May 5, had recommended on May 8 a general retirement behind Achi Baba. "Owing to constant fighting and to lack of entrenching tools, little progress had been made in the construction of a defensive line, and casualties had been so heavy that, according to one account, the thirty-one battalions in the Southern Group amounted to only some 15,000 rifles. Losses among senior officers had been particularly severe . . . ." and there were signs of demoralization. Liman von Sanders refused permission to retire, and the course of events proved him to be right. In the Second Battle of Krithia the British and French troops were expected to achieve the impossible. The plan adopted was complicated and the lack of high-explosive shell—or indeed of any type of shell—deprived the assaulting troops of essential support. In the result there was almost complete failure, and at heavy cost. The first phase had ended and with it the hopes of the Government that the Dardanelles would be freed at the end of a brief campaign.

The contents of the volume are well arranged, though a disproportionate amount of space has been given to the section dealing with the inception of the campaign. The maps, compiled by Major Becke, are specially good and greatly enhance the value of the book. It is a pity that it has been found necessary to print the appendices in a separate volume, as they are an essential part of the story.—The Times.

THAT EXPLAINED IT

Years ago Colorado had a great little fighter in Freddie Weeks. He fought his way along till he met Abe Attel—then champion. Abe said he'd a winner in Sissy Farley, he claimed Weeks in a few minutes.

Next day I was talking to a Denver sport who had dropped a bundle on Freddie.

"I can't understand it," he mourned. "But they pushed him along too fast. He's nothing but a kid."

"Sure," I said; "he couldn't fight at all without his parents' consent."

"Can't fight without his parents' consent, eh? Well, he surely didn't have it last night!"

NATURALLY

"I can't seem to place your face," said the groggy boxer as he kept swinging over the other's head.

He flew back to his favorite perch.

A Fishing Party

—By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Pass on good news, not news that's bad;
Make people joyous—never sad.
—Old Mother Nature

It happened one morning that a school of small fish came up the Laughing Brook into the Smiling Pool. Peter Rabbit was over there at the time. He didn't know anything about that school of small fish and he couldn't understand the cause of the sudden excitement. Rattles the Kingfisher started it. Rattles was sitting on his favorite perch on a dead limb of the Big Hickory tree on the bank of the Smiling Pool. Suddenly he plunged, in the way he has of doing, down into the water, and a moment later came up with a fish in his bill. It was a good-sized fish for Rattles to catch. He flew back to his favorite perch and there he thumped and pounded it on the branch until the fish was dead. Then he turned it around and swallowed it headfirst.

A moment later Longlegs the Heron, who was standing in the shallow water near where the Laughing Brook leaves the Smiling Pool, shot that long bill of his downward, and he, too, had a fish. Dipper the Grebe and Mrs. Grebe were sitting on the water silly preening out their feathers. They saw Rattles catch his fish and they saw Longlegs catch his fish. Instantly they were alert. They no longer had thought for the appearance of their feathers. Almost together they dived. No one can dive more quickly than Dipper the Grebe. One instant they were there and the next instant they had disappeared. But they were out of sight for only a moment. They came up on the other side of the Smiling Pool and each had a little fish.

Bad news travels fast. Good news travels fast sometimes, too. How the news that there was good fishing in the Smiling Pool traveled, I do not know. But travel it did, for in a very short time who should appear circling above the Smiling Pool but Plunger the Osprey. Peter always did love to see Plunger fish. You, know, Plunger is called the Fish Hawk. Presently he hovered for a moment, then down he shot. He disappeared completely, but it was only for a second, and then he was flapping his way up again. He had a fish in his great hooked claws. It was bigger than the fish that Rattles had caught, or the one that Longlegs had caught. Once more Dipper and Mrs. Dipper disappeared only to reappear, each with a fish.

Then Peter discovered Billy Mink slinking out on the Big Rock. Billy also had a fish. He began to eat it as he sat there on the Big Rock. Glancing over toward the place where the Laughing Brook flows into the Smiling Pool, Peter could see a brown head coming swiftly down the Laughing Brook. Just after it entered the Smiling Pool it disappeared. A moment later it popped up right in the middle of the Smiling Pool.

"Hello, Little Joe Otter!" cried Peter, dancing about excitedly.

Little Joe Otter turned his head and looked over at Peter, but he didn't say a word. He couldn't. His mouth was full. He had a fish.

Quick the Night Heron presently came flapping up from the Big River. Boom he, too, was fishing. You see, it was a regular fishing party and everybody was having good luck—everybody but the fishes.

Peter sighed. His sigh sounded almost regretful. "I—I almost wish I liked fish myself," said Peter.

"Chug-a-rum!" said Grandfather Frog. "What good would it do you if you did like fish? How would you catch them?"

That was a question that Peter couldn't answer, so very wisely he didn't try to.

CHAPTER XXX

A ball was in progress that night at Greenwich Hospital, and every officer, with the exception of the watch on His Majesty's torpedo destroyer Meridan, had gone ashore to join in the festivities. The destroyer, one of the fastest of her type, had just been assigned to special duty, and it was reported that the crew was to be increased.

On this particular night, the sentry on the gangway saw a boat approaching the ship and challenged it. Upon being told that the boat carried an urgent message for the commander, the sailor went to call the officer of the watch. At the latter's order, he told the messenger to come aboard with the letter. There were two muffled reports, and the officer and man died at their posts.

Almost instantly the destroyer was boarded by twenty yellow-faced little men, and the crew, taken by surprise, many of them sleeping, was summarily disposed of. Although there were ships anchored all about, none of them saw a thing that would lead them to believe that there was anything wrong aboard the Meridian. An officer of a tramp steamer that was lying nearby said the next day that he had heard noises coming from the ship that sounded like shots, and that he had thought it rather strange that sailors should indulge in rifle practice at that time of night, but he had said nothing to any one of what he had heard.

Of the entire crew only one man escaped the attack of the India Rubber gang. He leaped overboard and swam to the nearest vessel, but by the time he had made himself heard and had been hauled over the side, a black launch had approached the destroyer and Golly Oaks and his band of gunmen had gone aboard.

Already the signal lamp had flashed a summons to Captain Aikness, and, in a few minutes, a swift motor launch had brought the captain to the ship. He had with him the two guards whom Golly had assigned to accompany him, but Anna and Lila were missing.

Golly tried to question him, but the captain was so terror stricken that he could hardly speak. He managed to whimper something about a fire.

"We'll talk about this later, and I'll settle with you when I have more time," yelled Golly. "Now get up to the bridge."

The mooring was already slipped. The Meridian was due to leave that night, and the engineer had steam up. The possibility that she might not have a full head of steam had not occurred to Golly, although Aikness had drawn his attention to that chance.

Already the firemen were below, stoking frantically. A quartermaster took the wheel, and the destroyer went down stream, gathering speed rapidly.

Later on Golly, in the officers' cabin, interviewed Captain Aikness.

"Now let's hear your story," he said violently. "And be sure it's a good one."

Aikness told Golly what he could of the escape of Lila and Anna from the apartments in the Aldwalch building.

"Got out on the roof through a trap door, did they?" growled Golly, scowling. "I never knew that there was a trap door there. And I've been over the place half a dozen times."

"It was under the plaster," said Aikness, "in the little hall off the living-room. I saw a notice on the wall—under some torn wallpaper. They must have found that. It was a fire notice, and it said that there was a trap door in the roof."

"And they started a fire?" mourned Golly. "To think that I was the one who gave 'em patrol. The deceitfu' little animal! She said she wanted to clean her coat, and I believed her! Well, I'll go back and get her, one of these days. I don't usually miss what I go after." He showed his teeth in a grin, but he was not amused.

"We'd better mass speed while we can," urged Aikness. "They'll be after us in no time. We must crowd on every pound of steam."

"Be after us, will they?" snarled Golly. "Haven't I told you that I've taken care of all that? We're picking up the first L. and M. boat and lying alongside of her. There's one due out of port this afternoon. And, if they send cruisers to catch me, I'm sinking that L. and M. boat, passengers and all. D'ye hear? I'm blowing the whole outfit to smithereens. And with no danger to us. Those boats don't carry guns in peace time."

So that was the plan to which Golly had referred so darkly on another occasion! Captain Aikness gasped at the wickedness of it. To wipe out an entire shipload of human beings!

The destroyer continued at full speed, run risks that would have turned a respectable skipper's hair white, and came at last to the open sea.

"There she goes!" Golly stood by the side of Captain Aikness on the bridge, focusing a pair of night glasses upon a ship that was rapidly approaching. "I can pick her up. I've got a man on her. Give him a signal."

The signal lamp flickered twice, and a light winked from the stern of the other ship. For a moment the signal flew back and forth, and Golly shouldered to himself.

"It's just as I guessed it—just as I wanted it to be," he murmured, rubbing his hands. "Now we'll have some fun. Watch me now."

At that moment a great beam of blinding light swept out from the land and moved slowly across the water until it picked up the destroyer. So powerful was it that both Golly and Captain Aikness covered their faces and shrank away as it swept on them.

"Whack her up," shouted Golly. "Every ounce of steam—every ounce. We've got to overtake that packet ahead."

Flames flew from the destroyer's funnels. She shivered and shook under the throbbing of her engines, but the great beam of light followed her relentlessly, no matter how fast she moved.

And then Golly, staring landward, saw a red point of light flashing toward the destroyer, and a moment later the roar of an explosion was heard. They could not see the shell strike the water, for it fell outside the focus of the light.

Again came that long red flash, and something screamed overhead.

"They're straddling us," whispered Aikness. "They'll get us! They'll get us! If only we could——"

A shell struck the destroyer amidships, and a terrific explosion followed. Hundreds of tons of water were thrown high into the air, and the sea was strewn with wreckage.

The boats from a sister destroyer remained for hours over the spot where the Meridian had gone down, but they could find only one survivor—a little man who was strapped to a huge lifebuoy.

"My name's Oaks," he said, when they hauled him aboard. "Golly Oaks. I'm giving no trouble—I'm not that kind of a man. I'm all for peace and quiet and getting on well with everybody. Why, I saved a little baby once. The other fellows was for leaving her, but I couldn't bear the thought of it. Name of Lila Smith—she's a beautiful young lady now."

He became hysterical while he was being taken back to London and, when he found himself facing a group of stern-faced police officials in Scotland Yard, he feigned insanity. Not a word could be gotten out of him, but a confession was not necessary to the Crown's case.

There was the testimony of Raggit Lane and Anna. Their stories were all that were necessary to end the evil course of the leader of the India Rubber men.

And Golly Oaks, in the prisoner's dock, heard the little old woman whom for years he had regarded as mildly insane speak the words that were his doom. His eyes blazed as she recounted the things that she had seen, as she revealed the plot that had resulted in the burning of the old Pattuson mansion and the kidnapping of the baby. Della Pattison.

But it was against Raggit Lane that Golly's hatred seemed strongest. Lane escaped death by turning King's evidence, and the pleasure that he took in making things as bad as possible for his old chief was most apparent.

The deeds of the India Rubber men were enough to make the most hardened person shudder. Crime after crime, a tremendous game played for huge stakes—and all planned by little Golly Oaks and executed under his direction.

John Wade and his colleagues uncovered the South American cache to which, for years, the plunder of the gang had been sent, to await the time of final division, and this cleared away the mystery that had surrounded a long list of unsolved crimes for a period of more than twenty years.

But of the human beings who had been the victims of Golly's cunning, unbelievable cruelty and greed, only Lila and Anna had escaped.

After he had been sentenced to death, Golly tried to compose himself with music, and took to singing in his cell. The other prisoners and the warders who watched him made bitter complaints. But condemned men have their privileges. He sang on the morning of his execution, in his reedy falsetto, and when the trap dropped with a clang, the warders were not half so sorry for him as they had been for a number of other men who had passed out by that same route.

The End.

American women now use clay to improve their complexions. So how they turn to clay before they dye.

Most Men Prefer Hatchway

to any other kind of underwear—

ONCE you slip into your first suit, you will understand the reason why. HATCHWAY is buttonless. It slips off or on in a flash. HATCHWAY is comfortable. It has no constraining belt or waistband to get hot or rumple up. HATCHWAY is cool. It hangs free from the shoulders, allowing air to circulate all round the body. And, on top of all this HATCHWAY is stylish. It comes in soft soisettes, smart broadcloths and crisp, cool nainsooks, both in white and pastel shades. Any good men's store will show you HATCHWAY from $1.25 per suit up.
